

RUSSIA AGREES TO GIVE GREATER AID TO GERMANY

Congress Asked To Permit Repair of British Warships

Bill Giving FDR Great Power Also Opens Navy Yards To Allied Powers

Opponents Call Proposed Legislation "Streamlined Declaration of War" on the Axis Powers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10 (AP)—Legislation granting President Roosevelt sweeping powers to furnish the armaments of war to nations fighting the Axis was introduced in Congress today and contained one surprise: A provision which would permit repair of British warships in United States navy yards.

Administration lieutenants promptly laid plans to hurry it through to final enactment while opponents denounced it as a "streamlined declaration of war" and were organizing for a supreme effort to defeat the measure or narrow the powers it would confer on the president.

Aide from the provision affecting navy yards, the measure followed the advance descriptions given by administration quarters.

It could make own terms.

It would supply the president to turn over war materials, in hand or manufactured in the United States, to any nation which might contribute to the defense of the United States. He could set any terms, so far as payment was concerned, which he thought proper.

Congress would, however, retain the check which Mr. Roosevelt carried.

Joe Penner Dies Suddenly in His Hotel in Phila.

Stage and Screen Star Believed Victim of Heart Attack

Joe Penner
"Yokel Boy," a new stage show.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 10 (AP)—Joe Penner, whose clowning on radio, stage and screen made millions laugh in a career of fifteen years, died today alone.

The thirty-five-year-old funmaker—he made "Wanna Buy a Duck?" and "You Nasty Man!" national bywords—was found dead in bed in his hotel, near the Locust theater where he had been appearing in a new stage show.

Autopsy Ordered

Deputy coroner Bernard Dugan said death "apparently" was due to a heart attack. However, an autopsy was ordered.

Penner's wife found his body about 4:30 p. m. (EST). He had gone to bed about noon but had not complained of illness.

Penner was born in Hungary, in a small town near Budapest, Nov. 11, 1905.

His real name was Pinter.

He was brought to this country when he was nine years old and was taken to Detroit by his grand parents to join his parents there in about 1915.

Formerly a Choir Boy

He was a choir boy and later began his stage career in vaudeville and musical comedy.

Mrs. Penner discovered the comedian's death when she went to his room to learn why he had failed to keep an appointment.

Major Defeat for Mussolini Perils Last Stronghold On Albania Front

ATHENS, Jan. 10.—While Greeks at home rejoiced in the streets over fresh victories in Albania the forces at the front today reportedly pushed past captured Klisura toward Valona—last important port in southern Albania still held by the Italians.

With the spearhead of the Greek drive in the Klisura sector only about thirty miles from Valona, Italian troops beyond Klisura were said to be in disorderly retreat. The Greeks announced the capture of prisoners and material including many trench mortars, but said they had no time to count them.

Tepeleni in Danger

As a result of Klisura's fall, military observers predicted the Italians probably would be forced to abandon Tepeleni, fifteen miles west of Klisura on the way to Valona.

The Greeks met stubborn resistance at Klisura and said the Italians apparently attached considerable military importance to the town.

Greek communiques related the capture of height after height, many of them by bayonet-wielding troops in the weeks-long attack. Today the fall of the town and the heights were officially announced.

As Premier Gen. John Metaxas told his cabinet about the successes, crowds gathered joyfully in the streets to celebrate. Bells pealed throughout the country.

Klisura at Crossroads

Klisura stands at a crossroad—one leading to Berat and Durazzo, the other to Valona.

Emphasizing how important the Greeks considered the taking of Klisura, a spokesman said:

"The Italians have concentrated as many forces as they could in the determination to frustrate at any cost the plans of the general staff."

Coal Industry To Compete in Fuel Plans for Defense

Representatives of Five Major States Told of Government Plans

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10 (AP)—Representatives from the five major coal producing states were assured by the war department today that the coal industry would be given an opportunity to compete in providing fuel for ordnance producing plants.

The assurance, said Representative Edmiston (D-W.Va.), was given at a conference with Brigadier General L. H. Campbell and Colonel J. G. Holmes of the ordnance division after complaints were filed by the five states that fuel orders for an Illinois plant went to the oil industry without bids from coal men.

"We told them," said Edmiston "that in the interest of national defense it would be smarter to conserve oil than coal—we have all the coal we'll ever need."

Those at the conference—all members of the House Military Affairs Committee—were Edmiston, May (D-Ky.), Faddis (D-Pa.), Schaefer (D-Ill.) and Harter (D-Ohio).

They were accompanied by John Battle, executive secretary of the National Coal Association, who predicted that tonnage of the soft coal industry would be 125,000,000 tons for the first quarter of 1941. He based his figures on a last quarter production of 120,000,000 tons bringing the 1940 tonnage to 450,000,000 and current industrial expansion as well as seasonal demands.

Royal Air Force Launches Hardest Offensive of War On Channel Ports

LONDON, Jan. 10.—In the mightiest daylight offensive ever launched by the Royal Air Force, half a hundred British bombers and a great swarm of 500 fighter planes delivered a ground-shaking assault today over a thousand square miles of northwestern France.

The air ministry itself announced in general terms merely that more than 100 fighters were involved, but unofficial observers of this great action said the fighters outnumbered the bombers by ten to one.

They were declared to have struck at the channel straits areas of Calais and Boulogne and elsewhere upon the bases of the Nazi invasion effort, sweeping the German positions with bombs and machinegun fire—the latter from eight-gunned fighter craft which formed the biggest escort ever to take off from England.

One British Plane Lost

Three of the "few" German planes which rose to challenge the raiders were shot down, the air ministry said, and but a single British plane was lost—that on the return trip.

For an hour, just at midday, British explosives fell. Hits were claimed upon a series of airdromes—assaulted by planes diving down to within 200 feet of the target—and upon German patrol ships and military buildings.

The southeast English coast—twenty to thirty miles from the coastal targets—shuddered under the shock. Britons on the shore reported that bombs dropped by the first line of attacking craft were heard bursting in France before the last wave had passed out of sight of the English coast.

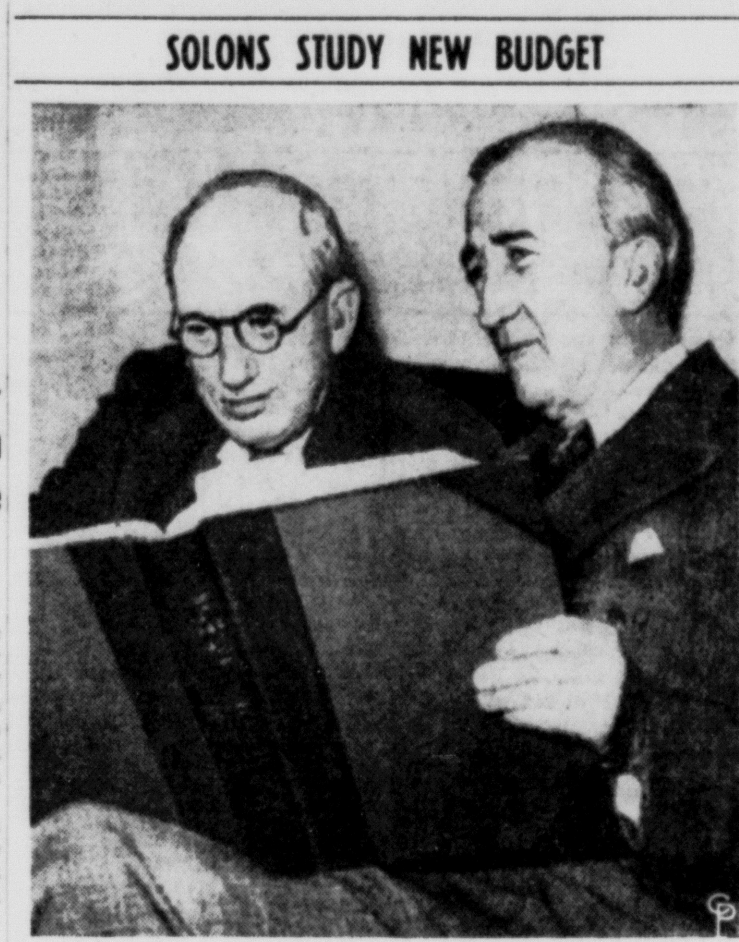

It was a raid likened by British aviation circles to the great Nazi mass attacks of last September on Britain, "but more successful" than these. British experts said it indicated that Britain now had enough planes to risk heavy losses in daylight operations.

Germans Minimize Raid

In Berlin informed sources asserted that a big group of British bombers accompanied by fighters had been beaten back near Calais. The Germans claimed to have shot down eight British craft. They asserted no bombs fell on any military objectives.

This daytime attack followed night forays even bigger in scope, extending from the coast of Norway to interior Germany and southern France—many of them carried out through very dirty weather.

Nova Starts Comeback By Defeating Comiskey

California Clouter Takes Every Round of Ten-Round Battle

NEW YORK, Jan. 10 (AP)—Lou Nova, the California clouter, came a long way back along the heavy-weight "Glory Road" tonight by punching Pat Comiskey all over Madison Square Garden's ring to win an easy ten round decision in his return to boxing's big time.

With a surprisingly large crowd looking on, Nova made it strictly "no contest." He won going away, just as he pleased. He floored the Paterson, N. J., youngster twice, cut him over both eyes with a slashing straight left, and drew blood from so many other gashes on Pat's face that it looked, at times, as though a bottle of catsup had been dumped on him.

The decision was unanimous. The Associated Press score card gave Nova every round, with only one third, anywhere near close.

Makes Good His Boast

Thus the ex-collegian from California came back, just as he has been boasting he would. Toppled from ranking as No. 1 contender for Joe Louis' crown sixteen months ago by Tony Galento, and laid low since then by a disease which forced him into a hospital for several months, he made good his claims that he not only belonged up there but that 200½ pounds, he was big.

Isadore Lazarus Denies He Acted in This Country for Nazis

NEW YORK, Jan. 10 (AP)—A 58-year-old Rumanian Jew, accused by the government of acting as financial agent for high-ranking Germans in espionage work and propaganda, was sentenced today to two years in prison and fined $2,500 for passport fraud.

He was Isadore Lazarus, who assistant U. S. Attorney Richard J. Burke said had transferred large sums of money from Germany for Marshal Hermann Goering, Dr. Paul J. Goebbels, minister of propaganda, and Hjalmar Schacht, ex-minister of economics, and other German officials.

The gray-haired defendant pleaded guilty, but insisted that while he was on friendly terms with Reich leaders, it was solely for the purpose of aiding victims of persecution—Jews, Catholics and Protestants alike.

Friend of Nazi Leaders

Burke said that Lazarus "according to his own story, said that he had been engaged in international exchange under the name Lee Lane, since 1933, when the Nazis came into power in Germany, and was a close friend of German leaders."

The government charged that Lazarus took money out of Germany in behalf of Goering, Schacht, and Robert Ley, labor minister, entered New York on a false passport in June, 1939, and later deposited a total of $138,000 in cash and securities in three New York banks.

Burke said the defendant insisted that he had used his connections to help refugees "get a small percentage of their money out of Germany," but Burke added "most of their funds remained in Germany and probably wound up in the pockets of German officials."

As Burke completed his charges, Lazarus stood up in court.

Denies All Charges

"Give me the opportunity and I'll bring the big men from Europe to prove that these insinuations, as far as my motives are concerned, are false," he said. "I have given thousands and thousands of dollars to aid refugees of my own race, as well as Catholics and Protestants."

"Send me to jail if you want, but let me clear myself of these aspersions."

Large Amount of Food, Raw Materials and Oil Products To Be Provided

"Greatest Grain Deal in History" Reported by Berlin News Agency in Announcing "An Enlarged Economic Agreement"; Grave Problems Arising from War Reported Solved

MOSCOW, Jan. 10.—Soviet Russia agreed today to send to warring Germany quantities of food, especially grains, in a significant collaboration officially described as "an enlarged economic agreement."

(DNB, official German news agency, called it the "greatest grain deal in history" and said it was so arranged that it could be called "an economic plan" as well as a deal.)

Russia also will furnish industrial raw materials and oil products in exchange for German industrial equipment under the new treaty, which runs until Aug. 1, 1942.

AMOUNTS NOT STATED

Amounts were not specified, but Tass, official Soviet news agency, said the new pact provides for "deliveries considerably exceeding the level of the first year of operation" of an agreement which was signed last Feb. 11 and of which the present program is an enlargement.

(The agreement of last February in its turn had provided for a livelier interchange of goods than the original pact of Aug. 20, 1939, sealed on the eve of the present war.)

Tass said the new agreement "constitutes a further stage in the execution of the economic program outlined by the two governments in 1939."

"Friendly Relations" Continue

It is said the negotiations "passed in the spirit of mutual understanding and confidence conforming to the friendly relations existing between the U.S.S.R. and Germany," and added, "all economic problems including those which arose in connection with incorporation of new territories in the U.S.S.R. were solved in conformity with the interest of both countries."

One of Five Compacts

The trade agreement was in fact one of five compacts signed here today. The others dealt with such subjects as mutual border revisions and settlement of property claims and migrations connected with Russia's absorption of Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania.

The question of where Russia expects to obtain the required grain may have been answered in Buenos Aires, Argentina, where informed sources said a Soviet trade mission already was en route to negotiate a "grand trade agreement" based mainly on grain. The Argentine minister of agriculture said "we are ready to sell anything to anybody."

Hopkins, Churchill Hold Long Talk on Pressing Problems

"Matters of Mutual Urgency to Our Two Countries" Discussed

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's personal envoy, and Prime Minister Winston Churchill talked for a long time over a luncheon table at No. 10 Downing street today to start what Hopkins himself described as discussions on "matters of mutual urgency to our two countries."

To the press, afterward, the American emissary predicted that United States production of war materials would reach its peak in about another year, and declared flatly:

"I have no misgivings about the outcome of this war. . . . There is going to be a united and altogether successful effort in the production of defense materials to be used by ourselves, Great Britain, Greece and China."

The luncheon lasted well into mid-afternoon and, even before that, Hopkins had seen Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Lord Halifax, who is going to Washington as the British ambassador.

Hopkins said he would be in London from two to four weeks, or, "until I have finished the job I came to do."

To most of the questions fired at him, Hopkins replied "no comment."

Small Newspapers May Escape Hour Law

Weekly and semi-weekly newspapers are already exempted.

No explanation was given for the secrecy, but Towers' attitude was in line with that expressed by Secretary of War Stimson yesterday when he parried inquiries about army garrisons with the assertion that he had no intention of being one of Hitler's sources of information.

Towers testified freely concerning work at the navy's domestic training stations.

Here's Summary of Bill To Give Roosevelt Great Power in Crisis

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10 (AP)—Here, in brief, are the provisions of the bill introduced in Congress today authorizing transfer of war materials to other nations:

Section 1. The title—"A bill to further promote the defense of the United States, and for other purposes."

Section 2. Defines "defense article" in terms broad enough to include almost any article, specifically mentioning vessels, machinery and material; defines "defense information" as any plan etc., or "information" pertaining to a defense article.

Section 3. Authorizes the president to procure by manufacture or otherwise any defense article and transfer it, on terms he "deems satisfactory," to the government of "any country whose defense the president deems vital to the defense of the United States."

Also authorizes the president to "test" or "repair" any defense article and to transfer defense information to foreign governments.

Al Smith Urges United Front To Aid the British

Says He Does Not Believe Public Takes Situation Seriously Enough

NEW YORK, Jan. 10 (AP)—Former Governor Alfred E. Smith declared tonight that "the big question" facing the United States was "whether or not, without declaring war, we can get wartime production."

In an address prepared for a nationwide broadcast under the auspices of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, he asserted that "up to the present time our people generally have not taken the situation seriously enough."

They do not seem to realize that the era of business as usual conducted is over and that ordinary easy-going living and peace-time pursuits must yield to defense," he said.

The former "Happy Warrior" said that "the government at Washington must set up an efficient, powerful and responsible defense organization. The president must be prepared to delegate authority in the same way that President Wilson delegated it in 1917."

Program of All the People

"All partisanship and personalities must be laid aside at this time if we are to have a united effort. Defense is not a Democratic party program; to be successful it must be the program of all the people."

Smith, Democratic presidential nominee in 1928, urged all possible aid to Great Britain and declared that "there is no conceivable ground on which any true can be made or any lasting peace found with Hitler until the German people and their allies have learned that their gospel of force, hate, domination and destruction will not be tolerated by the free peoples of this world."

"Unfortunately," he continued, "we have among us a noisy, slick, self-serving politician who is trying to make a political issue out of this situation."

British Shelling Tobruk in Opening Of Final Assault

Use Same Tactics as in Bardia and Victory Seems Assured

CAIRO, Jan. 10. (AP)—Britain's batteries in Libya shelled Italian-held Tobruk today in the initial blow of an attack patterned after that which reduced Bardia fifty miles to the east, five days ago.

Nearly cut off by an encircling movement of British mechanized units fifty miles to the west, Tobruk was rapidly being surrounded by British land forces, while its perimeter of outer defenses was battered by big siege guns rolled into place from Bardia.

The British, conceding it would take some time to bring up their full siege strength, said it was too early to speak of an "assault."

Face Triple Attack
The seacoast town—if the Bardia pattern is followed—faces not only a heavy attack from land but severe bombing from the air and shelling from the sea.

Such a triple offensive reduced Bardia in eighteen days and resulted in the capture of its garrison of more than 30,000 soldiers.

In another sector far from the Libyan front, British land forces were reported advancing almost at will across Italy's African empire. Some 2,500 miles to the south-east, the British general headquarters reported that troops of the reinforced South African army had recaptured Buna, in the Moyale sector of Kenya, which the Italians have held for months.

In between, there were reports that revolting tribesmen in Italian conquered Ethiopia were attacking airdromes and cutting the Italian lines of supply to the Kenya sector.

No Opposition at Buna

British dispatches said there was no sign of Italian opposition at Buna which is an important road junction point 100 miles south of the Ethiopian border.

The British indicated their forces had carried the fight also to Italian East Africa in the Kenya-Italian Somaliland border zone where they reported the Fascist troops had abandoned El Wak.

While Tobruk was being put under siege, the British sought to drive a corridor across the "hump" of Libya to cut off the whole province of Cirenaica.

Nova Starts

ger and stronger and better than ever.

Although Comiskey outweighed him by four pounds, it might just as well have been 44. This was all Nova. Comiskey, stopped by Max Baer in less than a round last summer and badly beaten tonight, was never in it. He dropped to one knee from a right-hand shot in the first round, but pulled himself up without a count by the simple means of clasping Lou around the waist. He slipped to one knee in the second, but it was not a knock-down. Then, in the tenth, as Nova battered him unceasingly about the body with both hands, he couldn't stand the punishment any longer and again slumped to one knee this time with his right hand resting against the ropes, and remained that way until referee Billy Cavanagh counted nine.

Nova Is Convincing

To a crowd of 12,801, who contributed to a gross take of $30,482.12, Nova was convincing in his boxing and punishing, if not deadly, punching power. Comiskey couldn't get out of the way of Lou's straight lefts, and Nova's right hand shota to the ribs made Pat wince more than once.

These straight lefts reddened Patrick's face almost in the first minute of the fight. They opened a gash alongside his right eye as early as the second round. By the time the fifth round came along, both his eyes were slashed—the right one twice—and there was a long, diagonal cut over his upper lip. In each round thereafter, Nova just went to work, and in each session Comiskey's face dripped crimson.

In the tenth, it was so one-sided that Nova's chief second, Roy Arcel, shouted to him to "take it easy," but Lou, sending the kill rushed in and tried for a knockout. That's about the only thing that didn't happen to Pat.

Hard-Fought Preliminaries

Bill Renfro, a young Irish-Indian from Comanche, Texas, made his Garden debut in the opening preliminary and won a hard fought four-round decision over Tommy Madden of Brooklyn. Renfro weighed 193, Madden 209.

Another youngster, Joe Baksi, 198½, of Kilmipont, Pa., also made an impressive bow into the Garden ring by whipping Frank Poreida, 190½, Jersey City, N. J., in another four-rounder.

Freddie Fiducia, 177½ pounds, Newark, N. J. veteran, made short work of Joe Matiss, 193½, Endicott, N. Y., in a scheduled six-rounder. Fiducia floored Matiss for counts of nine and eight with solid right hand smashes to the jaw and was banging away at the up-stater when referee Al Reich halted the proceedings at 2:46 of the first round, giving Freddie a technical knockout victory.

In the ten-round semi-final, Bill Poland, 189½, New York, outpointed Al Delaney, 188, Winnipeg, Canada.

Henry Moore, 188, Brooklyn and Floyd Gibbons, 210½, Detroit fought to a six round draw.

GIANT PLANE DESIGNED FOR HEMISPHERE DEFENSE

Comparison with the men (circled) near its tail gives an idea of the staggering size of the Douglas B-19, which has been under construction for four years at Santa Monica, Calif., and is known as the "Hemisphere Defender." The plane, with a wing-spread of 212 feet and powered by four 2,000-horsepower motors, has a range of 7,500 miles and can carry a bomb load of 18 tons or 125 fully armed troops.

Bill Giving FDR

fully called attention to at a press conference. The president would have to ask Congress for appropriations for the articles to be sent abroad.

Whether or not the act would lift the restraints of the Johnson and Neutrality acts immediately became a point of controversy. Senator Nye (R-ND) said it would. Administration men contended it would not and also denied that it would, as some contended, open the way for American warships to convey supplies to Britain.

The Johnson law forbids credits to nations in default on their debt to the United States; the neutrality act forbids American ships to go to belligerent ports, and places arms purchases here on a cash and carry basis.

New Law Would Come First

Mr. Roosevelt said at a press conference that if there was a conflict between earlier laws, and the proposed new one the latter would supersede the prior ones.

As the legislation went to Congress, the president appealed for all possible speed in enacting it. A week's delay now, Mr. Roosevelt told a press conference would mean a week's delay later in getting appropriations, placing orders and obtaining deliveries.

As for the measure's broad delegation of power, which rapidly became the principal point of contention at the capitol, Mr. Roosevelt said he did not necessarily want such authority as is contemplated. But he added that if the job is to be done, and it must be done, the power to get it done must be lodged in some one.

Believe Approval Means War

An inspection of the measure's terms quickly had the opponents of the administration foreign policy condemning it both on the ground of the power to be conferred and because, they contended, it would lead this country inevitably into the war.

And even in some quarters which favor unstinted assistance to the British, there was murmured or outspoken objection to the sweeping authority involved. This was particularly true among House Republicans, many of whom were highly favorable to the measure's purposes but opposed to its methods.

But despite the opposition, administration leaders still professed themselves confident of more than enough votes to enact the bill without serious change. How long it might take to get it onto the statute books, however, was another matter.

By its terms, the bill would give Mr. Roosevelt authority to:

Wide Powers Conferred

(1) Manufacture in arsenals, factories and shipyards any defense article for "any country whose defense the president deems vital to the defense of the United States."

(2) "Sell, transfer, exchange, lease, lend or otherwise dispose of, to any such government, any defense article."

(3) Test, inspect, outfit or repair any defense article for any such government.

(4) Communicate to such nation any information pertaining to defense articles transferred to it.

(5) Release any defense article for export to such a country.

In explanation, Senator Barkley (D-Ky.), with Rep. McCormack (D-Mass.) introduced the bill, issued a statement saying it "simply translates into legislative form the policy of making this country an arsenal for the democracies, and seeks to carry out President Roosevelt's pledge to send these countries 'in ever increasing numbers, ships, planes, tanks, guns.'"

Some Material for U. S.

Only such materials as our own army and navy can use will be ordered under the bill, Markley continued, and thus the United States "will be producing the same material for our friends as for ourselves."

Under the authorization to "sell, transfer, exchange, lease, lend or otherwise dispose of" the articles, Mr. Roosevelt could dispose of new or old equipment now in the hands of the United States fighting forces, Barkley said, and the present requirement that the army chief of staff or naval chief of operations certify that such equipment is not needed would be eliminated.

He went on to describe the section permitting repairs to defense ar-

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Greek capture of Kilsura in east-central Albania opens a new chapter in the Greek-Italian war—a chapter fraught with possibilities of greater military disasters for Italy.

That tiny Albanian village drew its name from the tremendous gorge of the Vojussa river at the eastern threshold of which it stands, commanding three vitally important roads. The word Kilsura means in English "gorge" or "defile." The Vojussa river gorge has figured in the history of the Balkan peninsula since classical times.

It runs east and west between Kilsura on the east and Tepeleni on the west, a distance of a dozen miles or so. Through it passes an all important lateral motor road, a well protected supply route for the now ousted Italian defenders of the heights south of the gorge.

Only Good Gateway

Similar rugged and abrupt heights leap upward on the north bank of the river for the whole dozen miles. All the main north-south roads in Albania, except a coastal route via Chimara, lead either through Kilsura or Tepeleni and thus those towns are virtually the only gateways from the south into the low coastal plain of central Albania.

Greek capture of Kilsura means the fall or encirclement of that powerful Italian defensive bastion formed by the gorge. The Greeks believe owned by the nations indicated as permitting the British to bring their naval vessels into American navy yards for reconditioning.

The provision, he added, "is broad enough to permit the use of any of our military, naval, or air bases to outfit and repair the weapons of countries whose defense is vital to the defense of the United States. x x x"

War Goods Not Transferable

In addition, the proposed bill forbids any foreign country which obtains defense articles or defense information from the United States from transferring them to any country without the president's consent. It also enables the United States to buy war materials in the American republics, Canada, or other countries whose defense is vital to ourselves, if such materials are not readily obtainable in this country.

There was much comment favorable to the bill. Speaker Rayburn said that "if we intend to aid the democracies, which I think an overwhelming majority of the American people are in favor of doing, it appears to me that this is the practical and efficient way to do it."

Senator Hill (D-Ala.) called it "the best and most feasible plan" and said it would "mean speedy aid" for Britain. Senator Thomas (D-Utah) thought the measure did not go far enough. It should have included, he said, authority for American ships to carry cargoes into the war zones.

Taft Leads Opposition

Senator Taft (R-Ohio) assumed a leading position in the opposition with a statement that the bill "combines all the faults of the worst New Deal legislation, including unlimited delegation of authority and blank-check appropriations." He added:

"In addition, it authorizes the president to make war on any nation in the world, and to enter the present war if he wishes to do so, as he apparently does. No Congress except a rubber stamp Congress would enact such a bill. I am unalterably opposed to it, and shall do all I can to defeat it."

Typical of the reaction of an apparently sizeable group of House Republicans was the comment of Rep. Eaton (R-N.J.). He favored all aid to the English, he said, but shrank "from furnishing that aid by turning over to one man absolute dictatorial power."

The "streamlined declaration of war" statement came from Rep. Vorys (R-Ohio) who went on to say that if, as he understood the proposal, "we are turning over this material without any agreement as to return or recompense, then before we pass the bill Britain should turn over everything she owns in the western hemisphere."

Immediately upon its introduction, the measure was referred to the Senate and House Committees on Foreign Affairs. Chairman George (D-Ga.) of the former announced the committee would meet on Wednesday to decide what its procedure would be.

Strong Group in Legislature Wars On Administration

"Too Much Administration Pressure by Leaders," Opposition Says

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 10. (AP)—Breaking suddenly into short-lived revolt, the legislature served notice on its leaders today that too much administration "pressure" might produce an explosion.

Breaks occurred in both Senate and House, on different issues, and the opposition was strong enough in each instance to make a roll-call vote unnecessary.

On the House side, the delegates overwhelmingly defeated, by voice vote, an administration-backed effort to force an immediate reduction of $4,830 in House expenses; the Senate snatched down its leadership on an attempt to have the legislature reconvene Tuesday at noon instead of the usual hour of 8 p. m.

Delegate Bertram Boone (D-Balto.) offered the House motion to cut expenses by reducing legislative employees and cutting salaries of the assembly's clerical help. For the last few days, the proposition has been widely debated in the cloakrooms and corridors and came in today with the public support of Speaker Thomas Conlon, representing the state administration.

Opposition Seems Strong

House action today indicated that the opposition was well entrenched. Boone's motion drew seconding speeches—both brief—from delegates Harry Warren (D-Baltimore county) and Jerome Robinson (D-Balto.).

Delegate Charles S. Houck, Jr., (D-Frederick) promptly moved to table the proposal and, without further debate, the House roared "aye." Administration forces failed to rally enough votes to force a roll call.

Still to be considered, along with Governor O'Connor's budget, is the proposal to put the reduction into effect next legislative session.

The Senate's rebellion came as more of a surprise. Senator Dudley G. Roe (D-Queen Anne's), majority floor leader, made the usual motion to concur with a House suggestion that the legislature recess until Tuesday. But the hour to reconvene was noon, not 8 p. m.

Senate Revolt Grows

Senator John G. Callan (D-Balto.) objected. Senator Thomas Johnson (D-Worcester), seconded by Senator Charles C. Marbury (D-Prince George's) joined in with the argument that county lawyers in the Senate found Tuesday their busiest day.

Marbury asserted that "as I see it, we'll all set up to do business here, but we have very little business before us," and added that, until major committees get hearing schedules lined up, the legislature's work would be comparatively light.

Several other senators pitched in, skirting direct reference to the administration's effort to keep the legislature working at top speed but implying clearly that they believed leaders were going too far at this stage of the session.

Squib Raps Assembly

Senator Cecil Squier (D-Cecil) declared he had been in the legislature "off and on for twenty years" and had found most of the assembly's work was done after dark, in committee rooms and private conferences.

"What we need is, not speed, but careful painstaking consideration of every matter that comes before us," he said.

Roe lent the Senate debate added importance when he disclosed that the leadership had planned to follow a regular weekly schedule—remaining in session from noon on Tuesday through Friday, with daily committee meetings. These plans now must be revised.

The assembly's pace slowed appreciably today, whether because of brewing dissension or because legislators were anxious to get away. Only five bills were introduced and the impression prevailed that the session was marking time until it could come to grips with the budget.

Here's Summary

Section 8. Authorizes the war and navy departments to purchase foreign-produced war implements whenever the president deems this to be in the interest of defense.

Eats Wire Fence, Nails, Pins and Many Other Steels and Regains Health

RESIGNATION HINTED

BOSTON, Jan. 10. (AP)—Ever eat a nail file, a belt buckle, a tooth-paste tube, or a chunk of barbed-wire fence?

One man did—and he's okay today.

Those are only four of the 1350 foreign bodies eaten on the sly by a former mental patient in a Vermont hospital whose case was reported today in the New England journal of medicine by Dr. Philip H. Wheeler of Brattleboro, Vt.

Released on Parole

Wheeler said the man has been released on parole, is now "quite stable mentally" and is reportedly in perfect health. The former patient, Wheeler said, also had eaten such objects as razor blades, glass, needles, pins, including opened safety pins, screws, nails, a bottle cap, tacks—and a piece of a hacksaw.

The doctor said the case was unusual in that three operations were performed over a period of six years for the removal of the objects, and also because of "the great variety of sharp metallic foreign bodies and the large amount of broken glass ingested without acute perforation of the stomach or the intestines."

Weight Almost Two Pounds

The total weight of the strange diet was 950 grams, Wheeler said, or almost two pounds.

The man didn't take his razor blades and other things "ment," however. He covered many of the objects with chewing gum and regular food, Wheeler declared, adding:

"He said that, in spite of these precautions, his throat had become very sore at times."

Italians Report Destructive War

Against British Old Plane Engines Ordered by U. S., Defreeze Charges

American Expert Says 'Out of Date' Power Will Cost $50,000,000

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 10. (AP)—Col. G. DeFreese, general manager of the National Aeronautic Association, the largest aviation group in the United States, today told the Miami Kiwanis club that the United States is to spend "some $50,000,000 of the taxpayers' money" on "out of date" airplane engines.

Speaking during the three-day mid-winter air show on Miami's municipal airport, Lerner said this country had radial, air-cooled engines far in advance of the 1200 horsepower British Rolls Royce engine to be produced by an automobile company.

He criticized the Allison 1100 horsepower liquid-cooled airplane engine being fitted to the army's new Curtiss pursuits, as "a five-year-old model."

Lerner asserted that though "we talk of an army air force of 25,000 airplanes and a naval air force of half that number," not enough airports existed to handle even 20,000 warplanes.

Citing that the United States has about 2,000 "so-called flying fields," he said that an army air corps of as few as 15,000 planes would require "at least double that number of bases and auxiliary air fields large enough to handle ninety-mile-an-hour landing speeds and planes weighing twenty to thirty tons."

Only "local actions" and artillery activity on the Albanian front were reported by the Italian command, but it claimed effective bombardment of Greek coastal positions and hits on anti-aircraft emplacements at an "enemy naval base."

Italy's December Losses

An official announcement placed Italian losses for December in the war with Greece at 8,951 men, including 1,301 killed, 3,052 missing and 4,598 wounded.

Virginia Gayda, leading Fascist editorial spokesmen, charges in Il Giornale D'Italia that British Prime Minister Churchill sought to establish "Anglo-Saxon domination of the world."

He remarked that the United States had lost "precious markets in Europe" and added:

"If the United States with a realistic sense and clearer vision of European things, wanted to settle its affairs better, it should line up, in the interests of its own trade, on the side of young nations (Germany and Italy) instead of digging such a deep and dangerous chasm against them."

British Ship Afire In New York Harbor

NEW YORK, Jan. 10. (AP)—Fire raged for an hour tonight in a freighter recently sold to the British and reported by police as ready to sail within twenty-four hours with a load of airplanes, Red Cross supplies and steel.

The blaze, brought under control at 6:30 p. m. (EST), was confined to hold No. 3 of the freighter, the Black Heron, sold to Britain three weeks ago by the Black Diamond Steamship Company of Weehawken, N. J.

Reynolds Creates Sensation as He Explains Loans

Tells Different Story about $305,000 than Told by Quayle

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10. (AP)—J. Reynolds, young member of famous tobacco family, today told a Senate investigating committee about supplying $305,000 to help re-elect President Roosevelt with these explosive results:

1. The committee, charged with investigating political campaign expenditures, issued a second subpoena for Oliver Quayle, general manager of the Democratic National Committee, to appear tomorrow and explain earlier testimony when Senator Tobey (R-NH) charged was "perjury."

2. Senator Hill (D-Ala.) demanded that the committee subpoena the "du Pont" family, the Pew family of Philadelphia, and the Rockefeller family, to testify about their contributions to Republican and Wiltkie campaign funds. Decision on this was delayed.

3. Chairman Gillette (D-Ill.) said he would ask the Illinois State Democratic Committee to explain its report of no income or expenditures in view of Reynolds' testimony that he—Reynolds—that committee $25,000 and a report by the Democratic National Committee that it had sent $25,000 to the Illinois group.

Recently Appointed

Reynolds, of the millionaire tobacco family of Winston-Salem, N. C., said his recent appointment as treasurer of the Democratic National Committee was a "post-election matter" that he did not consider $300,000 in loans he made to Democratic state committees in New York, New Jersey and Illinois.

He said that Wayne Johnson, finance director of the Democratic National Committee, had telephoned him that funds were needed "several doubtful states" and added: "I thought the re-election of President Roosevelt was vital to this nation and I was willing to do anything I could to bring it about."

Senator Tobey, who has been leading questioning about the Reynolds loans for three days, interrupted to point out that Quayle testified yesterday that he—Quayle—had telephoned Reynolds and arranged loans of $150,000 for the New York committee and $100,000 for the New Jersey committee.

Says Quayle Was Confused

"Mr. Quayle was confused yesterday," Reynolds replied, smiling, "never did discuss with him the loans."

Later Reynolds said he had discussed this detail with Quayle and Quayle conceded he was "taken" "not that he came to it over."

Senator Tobey, recalling Quayle's testimony about telephoning Reynolds to arrange the loans, said that Quayle was "guilty of perjury" and "let's get down to brass tacks."

Chairman Gillette observed the perjury charge was "a pretty strong conclusion" and later announced that Quayle would be called back before the Senate tomorrow to explain "these discrepancies."

Hoover Opposes Giving Roosevelt More Power

NEW YORK, Jan. 10. (AP)—To comment on the administration bill authorizing President Roosevelt to lend or lease war equipment "democracies," former Federal Reserve Board member Herbert Hoover issued the following statement today:

"The first thing Congress should consider is the suggestion of a modest surrender of its responsibilities. No such powers were given in the last war. So far as I know no such surrender has been made by the British Parliament during the last war or this war."

"We all wish our industry to be up to maximum output for defense and to aid other countries defend their independence."

"The practical surrender of power take these steps that are possible under this legislation is something else. It enters the field of preservation of democracy in this country."

Centralized Assessment Proposals Not O'Connor's

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 10. (AP)—Growing coldness in the legislative proposals for centralized tax assessment authority in Maryland, apparently communicated itself to executive department today.

In response to questions at a press conference, Governor O'Connor emphasized that the tax commission, which has studied the plan, was set up by the legislature and is responsible to the Assembly.

His only connection with the commission, he said, stemmed from the fact he appointed its members and that a copy of its final report will come to him as well as to the legislature.

Baltimore Man Killed

PIKESVILLE, Jan. 10. (AP)—Bailey, Baltimore county sanitation department employee, was killed today in the cave-in of a sewer excavation.

Bailey, buried neck deep, was crushed chest said Dr. W. H. Wyse, county deputy health examiner.

Discover Body of Missing Sailor

BALTIMORE, Jan. 10 (AP)—A body believed to be that of Gordon Baker, 24, of Baltimore, was found Thursday on the shore of Chesapeake Bay near the Claborne-Annapolis ferry at Matapeake, Md.

Baker had been missing since Nov. 17, when his sailboat capsized near Sandy Point. The boat, with the body of Baker's sailing companion, Gardner Smith, 22, of Catonsville, tangled in the rigging, was found shortly after the accident occurred.

Edward P. Cockey, traffic officer of the ferry at Matapeake, said a negro boy, whose name he did not know, found the body and notified him.

Writer Suggests Proper Dress for Young Children

Garments Should Be Comfortable and Roomy; Shoes Important

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

Manufacturers of children's clothes have made great progress in the direction of comfort, simplicity, and promotion of self-help.

There are few buttons, sometimes none at all on a garment; big buttons, big button holes; and zippers! The Home Economics Bureau of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., make available to organizations an exhibit on proper clothing for babies and children.

Mothers who make their children's clothing still may like some fussy dresses, but such are rapidly passing. Frills and ruffles are hard to launder and keep clean and are not durable. Worst of all the toddler or runabout who must wear them is hampered in his activity and on their account may frequently be scolded for getting them soiled or torn. If he submits to continuous caution about his fancy garment, other children soon will shun him.

Whether hand-made or ready-made, children's garments should be comfortably roomy. We may forget that the child grows and his clothes do not. Accordingly underwear and rompers often become tight. Not only are they very uncomfortable to the child but they are bad for his posture.

For play the simplest garment is the best. When the toddler or runabout comes home from a place where he had to be dressed up, see that he changes at once to play clothes and that he soon learns to take such responsibility himself. Do this for economy as well as comfort.

Be Careful About Shoes

Shoes are very important. For the baby and young child they should be roomy. The young child outgrows his shoes before they wear out. Watch for signs of crowded or bent toes. While it may seem economical to have a younger child wear the out-grown shoes of an older one it is very undesirable—bad for comfort, ease of walking, for posture, and the younger the child the more serious it is.

Watch the child's shoes for uneven wear. The child who toes-in or who rolls-in on his shoes needs special medical attention. Fortunately high grade shoe stores generally have salesmen who are trained in proper fitting of babies' and children's shoes.

You may receive measurements for home-made blocks which my wife and I devised, by writing me at 235 East Forty-fifth Street, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it. Also a graded list of toys to buy, and a list of books from which to read to the baby and young child.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. What do you consider the essentials in sex education at home?

A. Wholesome parent-parent, and parent-child relationships. The parent and child's attitude toward the facts of life are far more important than the facts themselves.

A Disheartening Budget Message

MILLIONS of Americans will be disappointed with the budget message delivered by President Roosevelt this week, not so much because it calls for unprecedented expenditures of $17,500,000,000, but because he apparently has made no effort to keep his promise to trim non-defense expenditures of the government.

Most Americans are of the opinion that the United States should aid Britain to the utmost, are willing to pay more taxes and to make greater sacrifices if need be for that purpose. However, they are not willing that the New Deal policy of wasting money on crack-pot schemes, with no thought of trying to balance the budget should be continued.

It certainly behooves each member of Congress to give careful consideration to the budget and to fight against inclusion of items in the budget bill which are unnecessary.

"The president's budget message to Congress," the New York Herald Tribune says, "revealed the weakest side of his administration. This is not because he called for record-breaking expenditures of $17,500,000,000 in the coming fiscal year. The nation was prepared for that. It is not because he admitted that this sum might have to be increased by several billions of dollars if the program of lend aid to England developed rapidly in the next few months. Nor is it because he hinted at a further stepping up of income taxes and a tightening of the corporate excess profits tax. The country has clearly shown that it is ready for such sacrifices.

"The dismaying fact about the budget message was its revelation that the president has made no serious effort to carry out his promise to 'cut non-defense expenditures to the bone', that he has not been sobered even slightly, apparently, by the prospect of a $60,000,000,000 federal debt a year and a half hence, and that he still believes, or professes to believe, that the size of the debt is of no particular importance so long as the interest burden is supportable within the prospective national income.

Indeed, in the happy-go-lucky speciousness of his reasoning he went even farther than ever before and urged for the first time that the debt limit be removed entirely, since 'we got along without such a limit for 130 years.' (He omitted to add, unfortunately, that that 130 years was a period before New Deal fiscal practices were introduced and before budget deficits, instead of being rewarded with distrust and suspicion, were cultivated as 'energizers of private enterprise'.

"It would be difficult to conceive of a more strained effort to justify a program than that which is embodied in the president's budget message. When he proclaimed a few weeks ago that all spending except for the defense effort was to be drastically curtailed he raised the hope that $1,500,000,000 to $2,000,000,000 would be lopped off expenditures during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1942. The actual total of such reductions is $600,000,000, but two-thirds of this represents, at this stage, a purely hypothetical saving.

"The president has asked for $995,000,000 for work relief, which is $20,000,000 more than the figure for this year. But he points out that this estimate is for the entire twelve months, while last year's authorization was for eight months only. This constitutes $400,000,000 of the $600,000,000 by which spending is 'reduced.' Not only is this saving at this point theoretical, but most persons will conclude—and, we hope, the members of Congress among them—that it is an extremely scant reduction for a period which, it is estimated, will have seen a decline of approximately 5,000,000 in the number of the unemployed.

"Where other reductions have been made they have been little more than nominal, while in many directions actual increases over a year ago are called for. Perhaps the most representative single example of the opportunistic approach to this whole budget is provided by the president's insistence on 'parity payments' to the farmers, a form of disbursement which is nothing more nor less than a political gratuity. A year ago, when the provision for parity payments would have raised the debt above the legal limit, the president conveniently omitted provision for such payments. Now, apparently believing that the country no longer cares how much is spent, he has reinstated them!"

What Mark Twain Said About War

IT IS A GOOD idea every now and then to get out and read again that celebrated excerpt on war from Mark Twain's "The Mysterious Stranger." This certainly seems an appropriate time to reprint it.

"There has never been a just one," Twain wrote, "never an honorable one—on the part of the instigator of the war. I can see a million years ahead, and this rule will never change in so many as half a dozen instances. The loud little handful—as usual—will shout for the war. The pulp will—warily and cautiously—object—first; the great, big, dull bulk of the nation will rub its sleepy eyes and try to make out why there should be a war, and will say, earnestly and indignantly, 'It is unjust and dishonorable, and there is no necessity for it.'"

"Then the handful will shout louder. A few fair men on the other side will argue and reason against the war with speech and pen, and at first will have a hearing and be applauded; but it will not last long; those others will shut their mouths, and presently the anti-war audiences will thin out and lose popularity.

"Before long you will see this curious thing: The speakers stoned from the platform, and free speech strangled by hordes of furious men who in their secret hearts are still at one with those stoned speakers—as earlier—but do not dare to say so.

"And now the whole nation—pulpit and all—will take up the war-cry, and shout itself hoarse, and mob any honest man who ventures to open his mouth; and presently such mouths will cease to open.

"Next the statesmen will invent cheap lies, putting the blame upon the nation that is attacked, and every man will be glad of those conscience-soothing fables, and will diligently study them, and refuse to examine any refutations of them; and thus he will by and by convince himself that the war is just, and will thank God for the better sleep he enjoys after this process of grotesque self-deception."

More Milk Needed In This Country

AN ARTICLE in the current Atlantic Monthly by Robert A. Wilkinson contributes several new thoughts to an old problem, the problem of the dairy farmer in this country. At the present moment the industry is involved in one of its perennial disputes which arises, as usual, from the producer's dissatisfaction with conditions which bring him less income than he feels entitled to.

As background for his suggestions for improving the lot of the dairyman, Mr. Wilkinson points out that, although five million farmers rise from their beds to milk twenty-five million cows each morning, there is actually not enough milk produced in this country to supply what the country needs. Paradoxically, there is not enough demand for fluid milk to bring the producer a fair return on his labor and investment.

In large families, Mr. Wilkinson asserts, instead of the prescribed quart of milk a day, a child gets only a tenth of that amount. Americans consume less than two-thirds of the amount which doctors believe to be necessary. This low consumption of fluid milk works havoc with the farmers' pay checks. They get five cents, let us say, for fluid milk sold. When there is no market, their milk goes into dairy products—butter, cheese, etc.—and the pay checks suffer accordingly.

Politicians and labor unions have complicated the situation. Constructive efforts by retail stores to sell milk at a lower price have met with stern opposition from dairymen, unionized deliverymen and distributors.

But Mr. Wilkinson sees signs of improvement in three recent changes. One is a move on the part of some distributors to sell two-quart and gallon containers at reduced prices. Already this has increased consumption slightly.

Another change may be brought about by the federal government's newly formed Interdepartmental Committee on Interstate Trade Barriers, which is devising ways and means of sweeping aside all obstructions to interstate commerce. And on another front an assistant attorney general is slashing away at artificially high prices and restraints of free competitive trade. The milk industry in Chicago has already felt the force of his attack.

Some unions charge as high as $400 initiation fee. That's a frozen asset. It freezes an unemployed man in his unemployment, which is probably its purpose.

The Eternal Argument

HE: Well, anyway, you must admit that women are worse gossipers than men!

stories or talking about football or politics or business or even about religion.

SHE: Well, if that's the case I'd like to know where you get all the information you bring home. I remember that story about Calvin Coolidge and Alice Longworth's baby. Alice told Mrs. Coolidge just before a luncheon one day that she was going to have a baby and Mrs. Coolidge told all the women at the luncheon about it. After a while someone asked when the baby was going to be born and she said she'd forgotten to ask. And in the middle of the conversation Mr. Coolidge popped out between bites that he understood it would be "the second week of March." He'd known about it for weeks but hadn't mentioned it to his wife. And if men don't gossip, how did the president of the United States know that?

HE: It proves what I say. Gossip is spreading around information regardless of where it hits. Women do that. Men don't. Men pick up information but they don't tell everybody everything they know. They don't mull it over and pick it to pieces and rush for the phone the minute they hear it.

SHE: Well, that's your story and you can stick to it. But I know a girl who works in an office and she tells me that the men in that place are ten times worse gossipers than the men.

HE: Ah, she's just jealous because the men keep what they know to themselves and don't tell HER any more than they can help. I know the type. A thwarted gossip.

Johnson Believes Radio Debate on Defense Is Unruly

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 10—Many people listened to Theodore Granik's batters in his regular weekly radio "debate" last Sunday evening. This one wasn't a debate.

It was a Kilkenny catfight. The subject, whether "Propaganda Is Injuring the United States," was about the only great current question not discussed.

The bout turned out to be a lussie between one team from the "American First" committee and another from the "Defend America by Aiding the Allies" group. The wrangling soon became personal, or at least involved personalities—the gentle Anne Lindbergh, the beloved sage, William Allen White, "Crackling oaths" didn't exactly go "to and fro across the flat-banged board, but otherwise it was closer to Fultah Fisher's Boarding House than to orderly dialectic.

Voices trembled with anger or some other emotion. Interruptions were frequent. Such names as "appeaser" were called and one gladiator complained to the referee that he had been fouled, or at least "insulted." The principle effort seemed not to be the arguments pro and con but, on each side, to question the motives, the good faith, and even the patriotism of the other committee.

Why a supposed debate on the evils of propaganda should be confined, on an adversary basis, to two committees, both engaged in propaganda, is the least of what Lincoln called the "astonishers" here. A greater one is why two committees, both devoted to American defense, but differing on methods, should be called upon to publicize a disunity and hostility only "short of war," by tearing out each others' innards in the pitiless publicity of a fierce radio wrangle.

Why Advertise Differences
The wrangle is there, but why advertise it? For example, some members of one of those groups believe to advocate an immediate American declaration of war and William Allen White found it convenient to leave it. For that action, the gentle Little Flower—our explosive miniature Mussolini, Mayor of New York City—accused this far more characteristic and experienced American of "doing a Laval."

This kind of dissension among the apostles of American peace, by whatever means, is reminiscent of the Donnybrook fair which developed during the World war on Ford's peace ship. Community thinking doesn't seem to click no matter how high the purpose. With too little thought of that I joined one of these intellectual commu-

But these performances, plus the exhibitionism of a third kiltster group, the "No Foreign War" committee, have brought me into agreement with Al Smith. In these dreadful dangerous moments, there is no place for the kind of emotional high-pressure group patriotism that at least two of these efforts are turning out to be.

Favors Radio Debate
This is especially true for a commentator who must express his own opinion and do it in full. For, if this most recent radio brawl brought out one thing clearly, it was that in one of these groups there is a wide diversity of opinion and that, if any man doesn't accept the conclusion of the extremists, he may be accused of treason both to his country and to his associates. A columnist can't have a group opinion.

This observation isn't intended to criticize radio debate. This column ardently believes in it. It certainly doesn't doubt the sincerity and high purpose of any of these groups. It merely intends to remark that this method is getting completely out of bounds. It is obviously inciting what Mr. White decries as "war fever," which would better be called "war hysteria." As the Sunday shindy over the air demonstrated, it is creating hatred, intolerance and disunity and advertising them to the world.

These groups' methods of telegraphic barrages on Congressmen isn't so hot either. They call for messages urging this or that position on policy in a highly complex and dangerous situation which the senders probably understand no better than voters in popular polls on current hypothetical war questions understand what they are urging. Millions Build His Monument

From Christian Science Monitor

Although half the world is at war and the other half preparing for it, on six continents today men and women will pay mental tribute to a General who worked for peace. The Boy Scout movement, founded by Lord Baden-Powell, has had a profound influence for good on the lives and character of millions of persons in the thirty years of its existence. Boy Scouts, along with Girl Scouts and Girl Guides, numbered 4,500,000 in forty countries, before totalitarianism perverted the youth groups into militaristic or political adjuncts in certain lands. Through its international organization, Scouting has actively promoted the idea of mankind's essential brotherhood the world over.

"B-P." as the movement he founded in 1908 affectionately knew him, gained world attention at the defense of Mafeking, but his book, "Aids to Scouting," published, oddly enough, during the siege, was to bring a more lasting fame. Lord Baden-Powell chose the fleur-de-lis as the Scout emblem because it is the "pointer" on the compass. Despite occasional lapses into barbarism, the world cannot fail to profit, and eventually to be guided, by the Scout principles of honor, friendliness, courtesy, kindness, and brotherhood. B-P. knew that lessons learned as Scouts are never forgotten by men.

Defense Council Is Holding Company

From the Johnstown Tribune

The New Deal, which has been the avowed enemy of holding companies, is fast building a defense setup which, for interlocking directorates and subordinate agencies, looks for all the world like the old Insull utilities empire.

First the National Defense Council was established as a sort of holding company for the procurement affairs of the army and navy. Then a holding company for the holding company was devised in the form of the National Defense Advisory Commission. And now the Office of Production Management has been created as a sort of super holding company, to hold the hand of the Defense Council which holds the hands of the army and navy which . . . And perhaps we shall have to ask the New Dealers to carry on from that point.

Will it get on more harmoniously with the president than the last one did?

Congressional comment on the Hopkins selection hints at a bad send-off for harmony.

Congress appears to have been decidedly impressed by the widespread editorial emphasis laid by our newspapers upon the fact that we have practically the only legislative body left on earth today that functions independently of executive dictation and that it surely had better stand pat for continued recognition of its rights.

Lawmakers Sensitive

Consequently our lawmakers, on an average, emphatically are sensitive to anything that they believe favors of executive encroachment upon their governmental branch's authority. And a good many of them pretty outspokenly feel that the dispatch of an unofficial White House agent to Britain strongly suggests something of the sort.

Anyway, to judge from their talk, Harry Hopkins wasn't the ideal individual to pick for the mission; not from Congress' standpoint. He's most likely the president's best friend, but too many congressmen deem him overly erratic to trust—honest and, in his way, intelligent, but a freak. If he's a spokesman they're afraid he'll misexpress us. If he's an investigator they're afraid the information he brings back will be colored by his own peculiar prejudices. Furthermore, they don't want any envoy sent abroad upon whom they haven't passed. They 100 per cent were consulted as to Harry and it makes 'em sore.

Harry Hopkins

They're not making formal speeches about it, but it's the subject of plenty of conversation off the two legislative floors. It's to be overheard from Republicans and anti-New Deal Democrats, probably amounting, all told, to a sizable majority of Congress membership.

Harry's adverse critics don't dislike him personally, but he's so close to the president that I think perhaps they're a bit jealous of him. As a tremendously active New Dealer, he's held responsible by the "antis" for a big share in investigating various New Deal policies that they've objected to throughout the current administration. They found fault with his judgment as Works Progress administrator and as secretary of commerce. Ever since F. D.'s facetious reference to "Tommy the Cork" they've called Harry "Harry the Hop." That designation is fairly representative of their estimate of him.

What About Salary?

Indeed, a question's raised as to his pay. The executive mansion's version is that he's to be unsalaried; to receive only his expenses, plus a per diem allowance. Yes, rejoin congressional critics, but what's a per diem allowance except a salary under a different name. Their suggestion is that the general accounting once should have a voice relative to the legality of the per diem, and maybe relative to expenses, too, considering that the whole air is absolutely ungovernmental.

The trip likewise is compared with the tour made by Colonel E. M. House, in President Wilson's behalf, before our entrance into the last World war, and it's significantly recalled that that was preliminary to our own participation in conflict No. 1.

When this new Seventy-Seventh Congress convened it was freely queried:

Will it get on more harmoniously with the president than the last one did?

The Youth Congress Loses A Pillar

From New York Herald Tribune

The disintegration of the American Youth Congress goes on apace. It has followed closely the pattern made familiar to us in the case of other organizations allegedly promoted or captured by Communist agents for "transmission belt" purposes—The American League for Democracy, the Teachers' Union, the Lawyers' Guild, etc. First come the reluctant suspicions of genuinely patriotic members of affiliated groups that their leaders have fish to fry, other than the objectives they profess. These suspicions harden into conviction as evidence piles up within and without of a complete subservience on the part of the leadership to the "party line." Revolt follows, to be crushed by the dominant faction, and then secession. The investigations of the Dies committee have greatly aided the process.

Secession from the Youth Congress began in a big way after its convention last summer, which refused to seat or to hear the pro-American delegates mustered under Gene Tunney's banner. It has now resulted in the withdrawal of the National Student Federation of America, representing 100 college student councils, one of the founders of the Congress. The vote to quit, taken in convention at New Brunswick, was 3 to 1 and was based on disagreement with the foreign policies of the Congress, on charges that the Congress was controlled by a "small minority group" and on its "unsavory reputation."

Other action by the convention heightened the emphasis of this step. Resolutions were adopted upholding the selective service act and urging full economic aid to Great Britain. A resolution which advocated sending food and supplies to European countries victimized by the war was defeated, and so was another which opposed repeal of the Johnson and neutrality acts. There can be little doubt from all this where the federation stands with respect to the emergency that confronts the country or where that stand leaves what remains of the Youth Congress.

Incidentally, these representative seeders, notwithstanding an offer of financial assistance, refused to

British Have New Plane Detector on Fighting Ships

By EDWIN C. HILL

From London, by way of Washington, comes the news that British have a new plane detector on their fighting planes which will give warning of other craft approaching at a distance of several hundred miles. It is hinted that the device is also a "pointer," which is automatically synchronized with the plane's guns, to deliver deadly, mechanically-aimed fire, as the hostile craft comes within range.

Sir Hugh Dowding, British chief marshal, is quoted as saying that the instrument is being rapidly brought through and that it will remove "the whole weight and stuff of the Nazi night bombers."

For a certain definite reason, the news interested this department greatly, as several weeks ago we were informed from a highly dependable source that just such an invention had been perfected by the United States Army, and that army officials regarded it as an invaluable addition to our air defense resources. There was an almost exact parallel in the description of the device with the now disclosed British version, the only difference being that our rig, as described, would be useless against any plane flying higher than 25,000 feet.

Given Practical Workout

It is, of course, entirely within the bounds of possibility that American engineers, having evolved the detector, supplied it to the British, and that it is being given its practical workout in England. We do happen to know that for the last two years there has been close co-operation between research engineers and physicists of England and America, in the development of methods and instruments of defense, and it is possible, of course, that the new detector has been jointly developed.

It is an unhappy but inescapable thought that with the turn toward mechanization, not only literary laboratory work, but a laboratory work is indispensable. Germany and Italy were supplied with just such a workout in their joint foray against Republican Spain, and by all accounts they made the most of it, particularly Germany.

I remember an article in a British periodical, about a year ago, which related in detail and, apparently, with well-documented authenticity the German experimentation with various types of bombs and planes in Spain, all done with characteristic German thoroughness, and with their penchant for scientific method.

Thus, if at some future date we find ourselves pulled into this war or any other war, we will have every opportunity to do a grand deal of useful laboratory work. We would not be going in with a gadget which we think ought to stop a plane at three hundred miles, but we would have one which had been tested in actual night combat in the skies. There is here, of course, the assumption that Britain is holding anything back in our better act.

Information Interchange

There already has been a vast interchange of scientific information between the two countries—much more than finds its way into newspaper print, if I am not mistaken, and there has been a pooling of inventive brains and techniques, now supplemented by everyday tests in battle, which certainly ought to more than match anything Herr Hitler can pull out of his Pandora's box. This country hasn't begun to realize or appraise its inventive or constructive capacity. We have pioneered so many new inventions, processes, engineering methods and mass construction techniques that we fail to realize our own amazing resourcefulness in this line. Familiarity breeds contempt. But, taking into account this proven native genius, our vast industrial establishment, our endless material resources and our capacity for slapping something together in a hurry, consider all this and, in spite of all our bottle-necking, one feels calmly assured that we can make the rest of the world in whatever it takes for national survival.

I am informed, again from a source which I rely upon, that defense experts aren't putting everything in the show window; they're every detail of the European war is being closely and intelligently observed; that America is bringing through a defense equipment which will make it impregnable—Cope right, 1941. First Sunday after the Epiphany

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX
WILDLY I racked my brain for an idea which I could suggest to Mark which would cause him to leave me. I knew from the sound of his footsteps that Cary had gone to Miss Althea's sitting room, and I wanted desperately to listen to their conversation. But my eagerness defeated itself. My mind was an absolute blank; I couldn't think of one thing to say.

Mark threw himself into a chair and prepared to await Cary's return. My pencil actually dug holes in my paper my disappointment was so great; but there wasn't one thing I could do about it. I didn't do much work while Mark was there. He kept making remarks, which in common politeness I had to answer, until I could have screamed aloud.

Cary's interview with his aunt was not a long one. He stalked back into the library, with red angry face, and paused beside his desk. Mark rose from his chair and went to him, but Cary was too engrossed with his own thoughts to be even civil.

"I'll talk with you later," he growled. "I've got to phone Horace Rand now." With the words he turned on his heel and marched out, leaving Mark staring through the open door after him.

There were three telephones at Purple Beeches. One was in the upper hall and one in the butler's pantry. Those two instruments were on same same line. The third was in a regular telephone booth, sound proof, in a niche just outside the library door.

Whether Cary was too angry to remember that the door had warped a bit and required careful closing or if it stuck and he didn't notice it, I don't know. But from where I sat in the alcove every word he spoke was plainly audible.

"I have to see you at once," he curtly said, a moment after he had given Rand's number to the operator.

"No," he continued, "I can't wait. I want to see you about some papers I found in my father's chest."

There was a short silence, and he spoke again.

"I haven't shown them to anyone. But if you won't see me tonight I will."

Another pause; then:

"Yes, I'll be at your home at 10 o'clock. No, I won't do anything about them until I see you."

Bang! The crash with which the receiver went back on the cradle would have ruptured the eardrum of a listener.

"Why in thunder do you have to see Horace Rand about papers from your father's chest?" demanded Mark when Cary re-entered the library.

Cary's face changed at the greeting.

"How do you know what I said to Rand?" he exclaimed.

"If everybody within 10 miles didn't hear what you said, it wasn't your fault," Mark returned dryly. "You didn't need a wire to make open a window and use the same tone."

"Good heavens, Mark, I didn't realize I was yelling." His cousin's words had jarred Cary back to normalcy. "But I am so furious I hardly know what I am doing. I'd like to kill him—him and Aunt Althea, too."

"Calm down, calm down, Cary!" laughed Mark. "I never saw you in such a rage. What's the matter?"

"Matter! Matter enough. I've found out why Aunt Althea tried to steal father's papers!"

"You have!" Mark's voice was eager. "Why did she?"

"For a moment Cary hesitated. From the way he acted, I thought he needed to talk it out with some one and Mark was ready to his hand. They evidently had forgotten that I was in the alcove, and I kept as quiet as possible, hoping that this time I would discover what I wanted to know."

Cary pulled another chair to the desk, sank into his own and beckoned Mark to the one beside him. Then he drew from his pocket some papers and laid them before his cousin. "I thought them the same ones I had seen before."

Mark bent his handsome head over them, and there was utter silence. "I wriggled unevenly. What wouldn't I have given to see that when he finally lifted his head, I received a greater shock than when Cary first found them."

Mark's face was ghastly white, even his lips were colorless. His hands shook so that the papers—he had picked them up when he started to read—nearly precepted.

"Cary!" there was agony in his voice. "What does it say?"

"Just what it says." Such sorrow and humiliation was in his voice that I, listening, could have cried.

"So that's why Aunt Althea wanted the papers?"

"That's why she wanted them. It is also the reason why she's been all honey and hug with the Rands all these years."

"Was this why you talked with her?"

Cary nodded.

"What did she say?"

"She said that but for my own ease, I would never have known about it. Which of course is true."

It was Mark's turn silently to bow his head.

"She said that now I'd found it out I'd have to do as she was always wanted me to—marry Irene Rand—and her idea is that Kaye shall give Dave Otis up and marry Proctor. Can you imagine that?"

Scorn ran in his voice.

"Did grandfather see these papers?"

"No, I found them first and hid them from him."

"Cary, it will kill him if he finds this out. He worshipped your father."

Cary's face hardened.

"I," he said, with emphasis, "worshiped his memory. Now, I'm glad he's dead, glad my mother is

Royal Air Force

for six hours, said the air ministry: fires were set off and a large ship in the harbor was squarely hit.

The announced results elsewhere: In Germany—synthetic oil plant at Gelsenkirchen left erupting in explosions and fires; factories, blast furnaces and railways attacked in the Ruhr; the inland ports of Duisburg—Ruhrort and Dusseldorf again bombed. (The German high command announced that twenty were killed in British raids on "various places" in western Germany).

Holland Docks Hit
In Holland—docks at Flushing, a major port, attacked, along with oil storage plant at Rotterdam.

In France—Brest hit again; Dunquerque and Calais as well.

In Norway—A railway bridge near Egersund "severely damaged." Delayed official advices from the Mediterranean area declared too, that in raids through Wednesday night and yesterday morning bombs fell "either on or very near the stern" of an Italian battleship of the 35,000-ton Littorio class at Naples, "causing a dull red glow," and that other bombs spread fire among an unestimated number of big motor vessels.

Explosions "on or near" ships moored at Palermo, Italy, also were reported.

The slowly gathered details of the day's raids in France as announced by the air ministry tonight implied, but did not directly claim, far heavier German plane losses than those craft shot down in combat.

A forest near Calais in which Nazi planes had been hidden was declared to have been set aflame.

Further, the ministry asserted that when British pilots attacked gun posts and troops near Wissant there was no attempt at interception by German fighters.

Messerschmitt Shot Down
A Polish pilot was declared to have flown at ground level across an airfield, opening his machine-guns on a number of grounded German planes. He reported shooting down a Nazi Messerschmitt fighter as he climbed away.

Another pilot told of spraying four German patrol boats with machine-gun slugs, and he, too, reported seeing a Messerschmitt going down, with smoke trailing, into the sea.

While last night's attack on the German oil stores at Gelsenkirchen and Rotterdam were overshadowed by the fury of the day's assaults, the air ministry's unusually detailed announcements of the results suggested that in the official view there were in the whole night-and-day campaign no more objectives.

Robert Daulbaugh Is Sent to Jail In Default of Fines

Assessed Fines and Costs Totalling $119.20 on Two Charges

Robert Earl Daulbaugh, 230 North Mechanic street, found himself in "double trouble" yesterday morning. Daulbaugh was committed to the county jail for 110 days when he was unable to pay fines and costs totalling $119.20 in trial magistrate's court on charges of drunken and reckless driving.

He pleaded not guilty to both charges and filed notice of an appeal to circuit court.

Earlier, Daulbaugh was fined $25 in police court for destroying city property. He was sentenced to twenty-five days in default of the fine.

Police said Daulbaugh, who was placed in a sound-proof cell following his arrest, set fire to a mattress and narrowly escaped being smothered before the blaze was discovered.

He was apprehended Thursday night after his car collided with a machine driven by Alfred R. Partington, 433 Goethe street, on Bedford street. No one was injured.

Officers said Daulbaugh has a long police record.

Home Economics To Be Discussed At Four Meetings

Teachers To Check on Goals, Philosophy and Plans for Growth

A series of four meetings to discuss home economics in Allegheny county public schools has been arranged by Miss Elizabeth Amery, state supervisor of home economics, and Miss Evelyn Miller, of this county, it was announced yesterday by Richard T. Rizer, supervisor of secondary education.

The meetings will be held as follows:

January 16 at 1:30 p. m., Fort Hill high school.
February 14 at 1:30 p. m., at Cresaptown Junior high school.
March 13 at 2 p. m., at Bruce high school, Westernport.
April 17 at 2 p. m., at Oldtown high school.

Many Changes Expected

During the past decade many changes have been effected in the home economics program as in other departments in the high schools. In fact, home economics has grown from a so-called "special subject" to the point where now some work in this subject is required of all girls in certain grades. In a number of Allegheny county high schools the subject may be continued as a three-year major course, which includes five periods a week with home projects. One school in the county is offering a course in home economics to boys and girls together.

Rizer points out that it is timely with this changed situation that teachers check up on goals, philosophy and plans for growth.

The discussions will cover the subject of "What Part Should Home Economics Play in Helping Prepare Pupils for the New Problems and for Probable Changed Ways of Living?"

While special assignments are made for each of the four meetings, it is expected that all teachers of home economics will be prepared to contribute to the general discussion following the reports. Each person given a special assignment will be required to condense her report so that it may be presented in ten or fifteen minutes. Each presentation then will be followed with a brief discussion of approximately twenty minutes.

Topics Announced

The study outline includes:

Jan. 16—Topic: "What is Home Economics?" Reports will be given by Miss Jean Baer, Fort Hill; Miss Dorothy Campbell, Allegheny; Miss Ruth Beall and Mrs. Imogene C. Watson, Fort Hill.

April 17—Topic: "An Overview of Home Economics Programs." Reports will be given by Miss Sara Street, Fort Hill; Miss Eleanor Perry, Flintstone.

Ingredients: Four cups all-purpose flour, one and a half cups brown sugar, one cup applesauce, two eggs, four teaspoons baking powder, two tablespoons butter, one teaspoon soda, and one-half teaspoon each of salt, nutmeg and cinnamon.

Directions: Cream the butter and sugar together and add the beaten eggs. Then add the applesauce. Next mix and sift together the dry ingredients and add to mixture. Then roll and cut with doughnut cutter and fry in deep fat. Drain on brown paper and roll in a mixture of powdered sugar and cinnamon.

The call for "something to eat" comes on the heels of all strenuous outdoor play. Snacks and wintertime sports are boon companions.

So be prepared to serve something hot in a jiffy. Stock the cupboard shelves with cans of soup, chili and baked beans. See that the refrigerator has a good supply of eggs, milk, sandwich spreads, cheese, milk, ham or sausages. Snackers want homespun, substantial food.

If Santa brought a waffle iron, try it out on the bunch. These PINE-APPLE WAFFLES are tops. Mix 2 cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/4 cup granulated sugar, 3 egg yolks, 1/2 cup pineapple juice, 1 1/2 cups milk, 1/2 cup crushed pineapple, 1/2 cup butter, melted, and 3 egg whites beaten. This makes six large waffles.

HONEY DRIP is grand on waffles of any flavor. Mix 1 cup strained honey, 1/2 teaspoon salt and 3 tablespoons butter. Serve warm poured from a pitcher. With bacon or browned sausage, and plenty of hot coffee, waffles make ideal snacks for a hungry crew.

SCRAMBLED EGGS 1941 go like this: Simmer 5 minutes in 4 tablespoons bacon fat, 1 tablespoon each of chopped onions, green pepper or chili sauce, and celery. Pour in 6 eggs, beaten with 1/2 cup milk. Cook slowly and stir constantly until creamy, then add 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon paprika and 1/2 cup grated cheese. Serve on a heated platter with stacks of hot buttered toast. Coffee or hot cocoa is a "must."

Make up this SNACK SPREAD and keep it in the refrigerator. Mix a cup of chopped cooked ham with 1/2 cup of grated or finely sliced cheese, 1 teaspoon prepared mustard, a teaspoon each of chopped onions, parsley and sweet pickles, and 4 tablespoons of salad dressing or mayonnaise. When the crowd gathers, reheat until it

CHEESE SPREAD
1 pkg. Liederkrantz cheese
2 tablespoons beer
2 tablespoons finely minced watercress
Mash cheese with fork until soft and smooth. Add beer gradually and blend to a smooth paste. Fold in watercress. Keep in tightly covered jar in refrigerator. Use as a sandwich spread on rye bread or spread on crisp crackers as an appetizer. May also be used as celery stuffing.

bubbles and spread on hot buttered toast.

For BACON SNACKS, spread squares of white bread with butter mixed with catsup. Top with strips of bacon and thin slices of onions, add top dashes of paprika and mayonnaise, and bake or toast until sizzling. Shrimp or any fish spread may replace the onions.

SCRAMBLED SAUSAGES make delicious bun fillers. Brown a cup of sliced link sausages in a hot frying pan, pour off excess fat, add a tablespoon each of chopped onions, green peppers and celery, and simmer several minutes. Then pour in 4 eggs, beaten with 1/2 cup tomato juice. Season with salt, white pepper and paprika. Cook slowly and stir constantly until creamy. Tuck into split buns, plain or toasted. Add slices of hot pickles and serve with a hot beverage.

Lift Leftovers To Party Level

Here is a tip that steps leftover food up to a party class: Put some chopped cooked ham in cheese sauce and serve over hot, seasoned broccoli. It makes a fitting luncheon dish and can be accompanied by a generous green or fruit salad, hot bread and light pastry dessert.

Shake Quilts while Drying
Launder quilts in warm, sudsy water and rinse thoroughly in clear warm water. Hang up to dry in a shady place. Shake the quilts several times while drying and they will not need pressing. If you want to press the quilts, do so lightly on the wrong side with a warm iron.

SOME WORTHWHILE
HOUSEHOLD HINTS

In picking a dressed turkey at the butcher's, remember that a broad, meaty breast should be sought. The breast meat of a high-quality dressed turkey makes up almost a fifth of the whole bird.

A weekly bath in hot soap suds will not only make a broom sweep cleaner, but will make the broom last longer.

An excellent topping for cornbread is a tart fruit sirup served hot.

More food value is preserved when a vegetable is baked in its skin than when it is steamed or boiled.

In all but baked dishes, flavoring extracts should be added when the food is cool, otherwise much of the flavoring will vanish in steam.

Orange Meal Garnish

Cinnamon orange slices make a delicious meat garnish. The ingredients needed include: three oranges, two cinnamon sticks, the juice of one lemon, one and a half cups sugar and one-half cup water. Make a sirup of sugar, water, lemon juice and cinnamon. Wash oranges, cut them in thick slices and place these in the hot sirup. Boil gently, without cover, until orange rind is clear. Chill in sirup before serving.

Prunes Can Be Used

Dried prunes can be used in place of raisins or currants in breads, cookies, cakes and other desserts. Wash the prunes and then cut off the pulp with a sharp knife or put through the food chopper.

Try This Recipe
For Apple Fritters

Apple fritters were a standby of our grandmothers and are still great favorites. Here is how to make them: Cut the apples into slices a quarter of an inch thick, sprinkle the slices with lemon juice and sugar, and let them stand in a cool place for half an hour. Then dip each slice in batter, allow the excess batter to run off and fry in deep fat. Make the batter from three-fourths cup flour, one-fourth teaspoon salt, two eggs, one-half cup water, one teaspoonful heated butter, and one-half teaspoon lemon juice.

Keep the Flavor
In Sausages

You will get best results from link sausages if you cook them this way: Lay sausages flat in a frying pan, add a little water. Cover and simmer 5 minutes. Drain off any water and cook the sausages uncovered until well browned. Turn with a fork, taking care not to pierce skins.

A teaspoon of mustard seed pep up a mixed green salad.

Apricot COFFEE CAKE

It won't be newer... but it'll be better... if you'll make it with PILLSBURY'S BEST Flour!

TAKE THAT WHEAT AWAY... WE DON'T WANT IT!

One important reason for the extraordinary baking quality of Pillsbury's Best Flour is the extraordinary care Pillsbury uses in buying wheat.

Every year Pillsbury rejects—refuses to buy—hundreds of thousands of bushels of wheat, because they're not quite good enough for Pillsbury's Best—not quite good enough to give you that extra lightness and delicacy, that extra richness of flavor, that extra attractiveness in your baking that you're entitled to get from Pillsbury's Best Flour.

There really is a difference in flours—just as there's a difference in the wheats from which they're made. It's a difference you'll be able to see for yourself. Won't you try Pillsbury's Best, next time you bake?

Valuable Free Premiums!

A Gossip and a Tall Story That Almost Got Judith into Trouble—if It Hadn't Been for the Measles

By LAUREL MANGAN

Luella Parminster dropped over that day to visit with Judith, and the young mother suspected that she was in for some choice bits of gossip from the suburb.

Judith didn't mind so very much if it relieved the poor spinster's sense of civic duty to retail the Mrs. Grundy output to the community. Being a young widow with a 7-year-old son to take care of didn't leave Judith with much time to worry over the doing of her neighbors.

She was both startled and perturbed, however, to find that on this afternoon Miss Parminster's talk was going to strike pretty close to home. The visitor was unhappy about it, too.

"I've been a good friend and neighbor to you, Judith, since you and Ken were just engaged, haven't I?" she demanded.

"You certainly have," said Judith. "I'll even go so far as to say that you've been a decided help at the time when Ken and I were getting established here in our little home, and after. Especially when poor Ken was taken."

Miss Parminster sniffed from force of habit. "Well, Judith, you'll understand then that what I'm going to say isn't malicious," she led up to the object of her visit with practiced finesse. "The whole neighborhood is talking about a triangle between you and Donald Murray and Teresa Merrill!"

Judith looked at her visitor oddly for a long moment. She didn't laugh, but she leaned over and put her hand on Miss Parminster's knee as she sat there on the imitation Adam chair in the parlor.

"How perfectly silly, Luella," she smiled then, her mind racing around the subject. "As poor Ken's employer and one of our warmest personal friends, naturally he would drop around now and then to see how little Bob and I are doing. And case of measles!" she returned with less cordiality. "There's an epidemic suspected at school, you know."

Miss Parminster thought that over. "If you don't feel you can, dear, I'd be happy to talk to the girl," she offered slyly, adding "as an old friend, of course!" Judith felt her spirit rising at the interference of the little lady, even though she realized that Luella herself meant nothing but good. It was just her gossip nature working.

"I'd much prefer that you wouldn't," Judith pleaded. "Teresa is a good friend of this family—and so is Donald Murray! They'll be welcome here at any time they choose, either singly or together. And now how about some tea and cakes?"

"I didn't mean to excite you at all, Judith," the older woman stated with asperity, but she dropped the unwelcome subject obediently, after adding, "I make it a point to defend and protect my friends when I see the chance. In Christian charity!"

Shortly after Luella Parminster's thin back in the shiny cloth coat had disappeared down the garden path in the direction of some other conversational call, Judith had all but forgotten the visit.

The doctor came seven or eight times during the week, and it developed that little Bob really had a case of measles, but a slight one. He was back in school before she knew it, it seemed. And then Miss Parminster called again—and Judith realized that neither Teresa nor Donald Murray had been near the house since the little old gossip's last visit!

Medical Men Are Doing Their Part In Defense Plans

Blood Banks Must Be Prepared and Collections of Serum Made

BY LOGAN CLENDENNING, M. D.

I have just been discussing with certain officials the preparations that are being made by the National Research Council for Medical Preparedness about our defense preparations, and I wish to state so far as my opinion carries any weight with the public, that I feel these preparations are being made in a very thorough and far-sighted manner. I also happen to know that the preparations are very accurate, and while publicity has been suppressed for obvious reasons, the committees are all working actively and making good progress. All the resources of the organized medical profession have been organized to carry on this work.

Naturally the work has to be divided and a mere enumeration of the committees which indicates the work they are doing will show how widely planned the work is. There is for instance, a Committee on Infectious Diseases which has set up consultant groups for possible epidemics of influenza, pneumonia, meningitis, measles, etc., a Committee on Tropical Areas. There is a Committee on Transfusions. The very important technical point which this committee must decide is to make available material for blood transfusions in large amounts at any given point. In order to do this, blood banks must be prepared and collections made of serum, which often does as much good as whole blood.

Many Different Committees
There are Committees on Heart Diet, Surgery, Anaesthesia, X-ray, Disease, Tuberculosis, Nutrition, a committee on Methods to Facilitate Wound Healing, which will be made available in every hospital and base hospital.

Every branch of medicine and surgery has a sub-committee which has control of special problems.

An extremely important committee is that on Aviation Medicine. It has been said that the Germans and the English are far ahead of the United States in research on aviation problems. The great problem at the moment of writing is the so-called "blackout" which results from rapid diving, but I think I can say of my own knowledge that progress is being made in this field and that American research on the subject has not only received at first hand all the research material which the English have accumulated but also it has made many independent advances of its own.

Experienced Medical Men

The members who have been placed on these Committees are all known to me by reputation, and many of them personally and I feel that no better selections could have been made. They are all men of wide experience in their field, many of whom have made important contributions to medical science, and all of whom have had practical experience with the actual conditions

"The Whole Neighborhood is Talking"

Teresa is not only his secretary, but also a near neighbor. Why should a visit now and then from her be suspicious?

"I know, personally, that there's nothing in it, dear," the spinster agreed readily. "Only you know how malicious stories can spread around in a suburb like this! People seem to want to know why Teresa Merrill always seems to time her visits with those of her boss." She leaned back, her mission stated.

"I see," Judith answered quietly. "And what do you think I should do about it, Luella?"

"Do about it?" Miss Parminster echoed, her mouth going very prim. She cocked her head on one side and sniffed. "I'd get up some gump-ton and come right out with it. I'd tell Teresa Merrill to stay away! She kind of likes Donald Murray too, doesn't she?"

"I'm afraid that I can't very well turn away anyone who is kind enough to drop in to inquire about little Bob, especially since he's been home and in bed with a suspected

"The Authority on Authorities"

MAGIC NUMBER IS 3
THERE IS one situation in which the important thing to know is whether your partner has three cards of a particular suit. If he tells you by his play that he does not hold exactly three, you can then nearly always tell what number he does hold, so that you can govern your own play correctly. That is when the declarer embarks upon play of the dummy's suit, in which you hold the ace, the dummy being void of any re-entries. By telling you the length of his own holding, your partner can guide you to the correct time for play of your ace.

Questions and Answers

V. W. C.—"What would cause the palms of one's hands to perspire constantly? Is it connected in any way with severe persistent headaches?"

Answer—In most instances this is simply a manifestation of nervousness or instability of the circulation. It may occur in thyroid disease. The fact that it is connected with headaches would indicate that it is mostly nervous in origin. The less you think about it, the better, because it has no serious significance.

More Draftees Reach Fort George G. Meade

FORT GEORGE G. MEADE, Md., Jan. 10 (AP)—Eighty-one selective service trainees from Richmond, Va., arrived at this reception center Thursday to be "processed" for transfer to army units with which they will serve for a year.

The Richmonders were the first arrivals of the 4,918 trainees included in the second draft call in the Third Corps area.

Three of them arrived at 7:45 p. m., and seventy-eight came in before midnight. Tomorrow 120 draftees from Roanoke, Va., are expected. Immediately upon arrival, the Richmonders were sent to the huge 2,000-man cafeteria and fed. Then they were issued bedclothes and assigned to barracks.

Tomorrow they'll be divested of their civilian clothes, and receive uniforms and other equipment. Next they will be classified and assigned to posts in Texas, Oklahoma, North Carolina, Georgia or Virginia.

It is estimated that 100,000 stars are visible through use of modern telescopes.

Influenza Ends Classes in Six W. Va. Schools

Epidemic Breaks Out in Mercer, Marshall and Logan Counties

(By The Associated Press)

Influenza temporarily ended classes in a half-dozen widely separated schools of West Virginia today and decimated attendance in at least four other counties.

Certain schools were ordered closed because of an epidemic in Marshall and Mercer counties. Concord State Teachers college at Athens, also in Mercer county, reported 107 of its 383 students were absent because of illness.

Dr. A. M. Price, director of the communicable disease division of the State Health Department, said at Charleston that he would "advise against" closing schools as a general policy.

"Experience shows," he said, "that the trend of the disease is not affected in an epidemic by closing schools."

It may be economically sound to close them," he added, "when attendance drops off to the point that it is useless to continue classes."

The Union high school at Benwood, where 200 cases of influenza have developed, and all elementary schools at nearby McMechen, where there were an estimated 110 cases, were ordered closed by Dr. W. G. C. Hill, Marshall county health officer.

Dr. Sam Holyrod, Mercer county health officer, estimated that 1,800 pupils and teachers were kept from school because of the epidemic.

County School Superintendent C. H. Archer said "several schools" in the Matoka and Bramwell areas had suspended classes as a temporary measure. School Superintendent C. O. Batson of Mingo county estimated that 4,000 pupils of 12,000 enrolled were absent yesterday, while in Logan county the absentee list was estimated at 3,000 of 19,000 enrolled.

Two-Way Appointment for One Seat In United States Senate Forecast

Holt and Neely Both Say They Intend To Name New Senator

By MAX FULLERTON
CHARLESTON, W. Va., Jan. 10.—A two-way appointment for one United States Senate seat from West Virginia appeared likely today to spice inauguration day in the mountain state and climax an old political feud.

Senator M. M. Neely, leaving behind two years of his third term, will become the twenty-first governor Monday and intends to name his successor.

Reports in authoritative quarters of the statehouse today were that retiring Governor Homer A. Holt would announce an appointment.

Both are Democrats but head opposing factions.

The possibility of such a development has existed since the November 5 election when Neely decisively defeated his Republican opponent, Mayor D. Boone Dawson of Charleston.

Joseph Rosier Mentioned

Holt neither confirmed nor denied the reports he would make a choice for Neely's unexpired term. Those sources who said he would do so withheld information about when it would be done and mentioned no persons who might be under consideration.

Neely, saying farewell to the Senate in Washington, did not comment other than to reiterate he would make an appointment, announcing the name of the man when he takes his oath as governor.

Reports, not confirmed by Neely, have been that he had decided upon President Joseph Rosier of Fairmont State Teachers college.

The exact methods by which the opposing political leaders would disclose their choices remained undetermined.

Holt, immediately after the election, hinted that he intended to name someone for senator but has made no public statement since then. At that time Neely declared definitely that "I certainly expect to appoint my own successor."

Observers here have been of the opinion that if there are two appointments, the matter would be settled by the Senate in Washington.

The statehouse reports of the "dual" appointment indicated that the enmity between the two factional leaders would continue to the end.

Neely Forces Win

Neely, as head of the so-called "federal" faction of the Democratic party in West Virginia, defeated the "statehouse" group led by Holt when Neely won the gubernatorial nomination in the May, 1940, primary.

Three weeks later a slate of state committee officials backed by Neely was chosen in Parkersburg. In September the gubernatorial nominee held sufficient control over the state convention to have men backed by him nominated for the State Supreme Court.

Climaxing a front-line party battle, Neely forces command enough strength to choose officers of the legislature approved by the governor-elect. The men elected are pledged to support his policies.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Jan. 10.—Federal Judge George W. McClintic announced today he had changed his mind about leaving the bench on his seventi-fifth birthday, January 14.

McClintic announced, when he gave notice to the public a short time ago, that he would retire as District Judge under provisions of section 375 of title 28 of the United States code, annotated, on the fourteenth day of January, 1941, he fully intended to do so, but now, owing to circumstances, then wholly unknown to him, he will not retire on the date set out above. However, it is his intention to retire in the near future upon a date not yet fixed."

Schell Family Is Wiped Out in Early Morning Tragedy Near Antioch

Charred Bones Found in Ruins of Home Several Hours after It Is Believed Fire Broke Out

KEYSER, W. Va., Jan. 10.—No inquest will be held. It was announced today in the death of Henry Schell, 74-year-old farmer of the Antioch section, and his four daughters, who perished when their home was completely destroyed by fire early this morning.

Justice of the Peace J. E. Aron-halt, acting as coroner, and Prosecuting Attorney Joseph E. Hodgson agreed that a formal investigation would not be called, unless especially requested by relatives.

Charred Bones Found

When the blackened ruins of the three-room one-story frame building were discovered this morning at 6:20, charred bones were all that remained of Schell and his daughters, Temple, 6, Laura, 10, Leveda, 13 and Ida Feaster, 26.

First to learn of the tragedy was Ira McNear, West Virginia Pulp and Paper company employee, who passed the site of the house on his way to work.

Although the exact time of the fire was undetermined, it was thought to have occurred in the neighborhood of 2 a. m. State police said one neighbor reported his dog began barking about that time, but he did not investigate. Another resident of the section said he was up near 2 o'clock and saw what he thought was the reflection of a fire, but said he could not tell where the flames were.

Exact cause of the blaze is unknown, but one theory unofficially advanced was that the flames originated in a straw mattress on Schell's bed which was near the heating stove in the house.

Entire Family Wiped Out

This morning's blaze completed the wiping out of the entire Schell family. Mrs. Esther Lyon Schell, Schell's wife and mother of the girls, who died Wednesday, was to have been buried at 11 o'clock this morning. Unaware of the tragedy, Vance Doll, Antioch, who was to have taken the family to the funeral at Lahmansville, came to find the home in smoldering ruins and its occupants dead.

At the time of the fire, Mrs. Schell's body was at the N. L. Rogers Funeral Home here.

Today's rites were cancelled, and services for the entire family will be held at 11 a. m. Sunday at the Lahmansville church, with the Rev. Benjamin Reed officiating.

The remains of the father and daughters will be interred in one casket.

Mr. Schell is survived by one sister, Miss Annie Schell, Cumberland, and two brothers, William Schell, Cumberland, and Milton Schell, Cincinnati.

Teacher Resigns

Garrett Farmers Meet Today To Discuss Survey

Procedure Desirable in Potomac River Basin Will Be Explained

OALAND, Jan. 10.—For the purpose of discussing the kind of program and administrative procedure desirable in the Potomac river basin, a number of farmers of that section in Garrett county touched by the river have been invited to meet with representatives of the Potomac Flood Control Survey in the office of John H. Carter, county agent, Saturday morning, January 11, at 9 o'clock.

Making Survey
A survey of the Potomac area has been under way for some time now and a number of conferences have already been held by specialists from Washington and state representatives.

The program to be carried out will be designed to best serve the people and conserve natural resources in the area, it has been stated, and for this reason those in charge wish to get the opinion of people living in that section.

Mr. Carter notified a number of farmers by letter of the meeting, but the conference is not limited to those receiving the letters. Anyone interested in the question is entitled to participate.

To Discuss Regulations
Some of the things to be discussed at other meetings and which will probably be brought up at this meeting tomorrow will be the kind of forestry management practices desirable in this county; whether or not regulations should be enforced on skidding or logging straight down hill; regulations governing cutting of mine props and mill timber; possible payments to farmers or timber owners carrying out forestry management; whether or not more dams are practical; what type of government supervision, if any, should be inaugurated in the Potomac watershed area, and others.

Fr. John C. Broderick, pastor, performing the ceremony.

Miss Rita Lawton and John Michael were attendants for the couple. Only members of the immediate families and a few close friends were present.

Girl Held for Trying To Help Kidnapers Get Out of Jail

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Jan. 10.—The FBI tonight announced the arrest of a 19-year-old girl on a charge of aiding three self-confessed kidnapers in an attempt to break from the Cabell jail.

The girl, booked as Thelma Neal, waived preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner J. P. Douglas and was released on $200 bond.

The escape plot was thwarted last week when jail attaches discovered a two-foot section of steel bar had been sawed, then propped in place in the cell occupied by Axel Wyatt, 16, and Edward Williams, 16.

They, with Sam De Lung, Jr., 20, were sentenced to five to ten years in the Chillicothe, O., federal reformatory after pleading guilty to abducting Dorse K. Wilson in Cincinnati, O., several weeks ago and forcing him to accompany them to the Huntington district.

Douglas said the girl admitted she brought a pie to the jail for the youths, but denied it concealed back-saw blades which were found after discovery of the escape attempt.

Wyatt, Williams and De Lung were immediately transferred to the reformatory.

Hardy County To Send Seven Men to the Army

Draft Board Announces They Will Leave for Camp January 13

MOOREFIELD, Jan. 10.—Hardy county's quota for selective service for January has been reduced to seven from the original quota of eight, the local selective service board announced this week.

Three volunteers, Herman Paul Boswell, Weymouth Junior Cleaver and Harold Franklin Miley, all of Moorefield, make it necessary to only call four men on the January call. Men whose numbers are up and who have passed the physical examination are Roy Taylor Wilson, William Vernon Yankee, Thomas William Stump and Andrew Jackson Helmick.

Registrants and volunteers will leave for camp January 13. The original quota in Hardy county was for forty-eight men by July 1. This figure has been revised tentatively to thirty.

Plan Training Course

A committee of Hardy county businessmen will act in an advisory capacity with the educational officials in setting up and the administration of the National Youth Defense program and training courses.

The courses are for out of school young men between the ages of 17 and 25 in rural counties and are free to enrollees. The primary course will cover eight weeks of fifteen hours per week and a secondary course will be for eight weeks for thirty hours per week. The registrants will be trained in various trades including woodworking, electrical wiring, repair and care of trucks, tractors and diesels, metal welding, carpentering, radio and other skilled trades.

Educational leaders stated that graduates of the two courses could be assured of positions and would be assisted in being placed. Nine young men have already registered and the tentative courses will include places for eighty men from the county.

Present plans are for one school in Moorefield and one across the mountain. Businessmen on the committee are L. E. Newton, W. C. Calhoun, R. E. Fisher, chairman, Alf Hedrick, Miller Frye, Wardensville; J. Ward Wood, Lost City, and Roy Bean, Inkerman. School authorities in the group are County Superintendent G. R. Kiraote, Vo-ag instructor, C. B. Hiett, Principals John T. St. Clair, Quentin Evans and J. Allen Hawkins.

Fort Hill Cagers Upset LaSalle Five, 31-30

Hilltoppers Put On Hair-Raising Finish To Win

Billy Dean's Foul Toss With 15 Seconds To Go Decides Battle

Winning Point Marks First Time Sentinels Ahead in Game

A foul goal by Billy Dean in the 15 seconds of play gave Coach Cavanaugh's Fort Hill high school cagers a hair-raising 31-30 victory over the previously undefeated LaSalle Explorers last night at the Sentinel cage shed in one of the wildest intra-city battles in record.

Given only an outside chance to win back the Explorers who went down the game with five straight losses under their belts, the Hilltoppers and White Hoosiers fought a determined uphill battle, going ahead for the first time in the game when Dean looped his last-minute shot.

The Sentinels appeared ready to take the lead in the third stanza when the North Enders held a nine-point lead, but the Cavanaugh floormen wouldn't give up. They tied the score with three minutes to go when Junior Rice, the scoring star of the battle, converted a one-dancer when fouled by Vic Malloy.

Then outtaught the Explorers, the remainder of the tussle was a horse race in sight.

The triumph for the Hilltoppers came when the jump in the three-minute race for city honors, won last night by Allegany, and gave indications that the chase may develop into a "horse race" between the Sentinels and Explorers.

A crowd of 1500 persons saw the LaSalle outfit jump away to a 1-0 lead when John Small, elongated and Gold pivot man, tallied a goal and then increase its lead little by little until it reached a stage in the second half where the LaSalle players were yelling for a run-around.

But the hitherto slick-passing Explorers never did show the all-around form which carried them to the impressive victories. Their passing was faulty, their shooting off and they failed to work the ball for close shots, which really was the feature of their wins.

Stage Brief Sport

Only once, near the end of the chapter, did they really click. They rammed in eight points in two minutes to jump from a 19-16 lead to a 27-20 advantage as the frame ended. After that it was the Fort Hill team which looked like the pre-emptive favorite.

Penny Shaffer and Dick Boyle of LaSalle's top point-getters had eight points each, the former making four field goals to tie with the winners in that department and the latter registering five field goals and two of three free throws. Small was second with seven baskets.

Trailing Rice for the Sentinels in the game were Paul Whitford and John with six counters, and John Jones and Jack Cook with four points each. But, in short, it was a close victory, with Rice supplying 10 points and the other four turning in outstanding floor games.

It was a big factor under the score for the Scarlet and White, the control of the rebounds. Small of the losers and Cook of the winners, constant threat with his kicking up of LaSalle pass plays.

Explorers Gain Early Lead

Coach "Pat" Conway's quint reeled off six points in the opening stanza before Whitford was able to tie the score. The Hilltoppers were a loss two minutes before the heat. Blades dropped the same kind of a shot to cut the Explorers' lead to two points.

Boyle came back with a set of points and seconds to go to make a last quarter score 8 to 4. Small added a point at the charity shot to start the second quarter, but registered on a dribble-in and lacked on a foul to make the score 9-7, with five minutes remaining. Malloy made one of two pitches and Small fired in a shot before Blades tipped in a three-pointer for the Sentinels which tied the score 12-7. With a minute to go, Shaffer looped in a two-point shot, but a foul, making the half score 14-10.

Sentinels Cut Down Lead

Shaffer and Dean traded baskets in the second half got underway. Boyle and Dean exchanged one-pointers, each making one of two shots to make the score 17-13. Boyle hit the target on a long shot to give the Explorers a 19-13 lead. Then McGraw's pass under the Sentinel basket went awry. Boyle pulling it in and making a foul goal, which left the winners two markers behind.

Boyle pocketed a foul to make the score 19-16, but it was at this stage that the Blue and Gold unleashed a brief but lightning attack to cut it to three (28-25). Boyle hit out on a long toss from the back but Rice and Dean dropped the successive baskets to cut the

From the PRESS BOX Dog Lovers Urged To Pay Tribute To House of Stevens

By JOHN LARDNER
North American Newspaper Alliance

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—The house of Stevens, which established the hot dog as a national institution, will be rewarded next week with a testimonial dinner, and your agent grabs this opportunity to survey the life and history of the victual in question.

It is no secret around the baseball circuit that your agent is perhaps the world's foremost appraiser of "Le Chien Chaud." When I enter a ball park, word is rushed to the chef, and the kitchen becomes a turmoil of excitement.

"Vite, vite, mes enfants!" screams the Maestro. "To the kennels! Bring me the choicest sausage to be found. Assemble my materials. Quick with the mustard, Cesar. Fetch me my palette, Jules. I will show the great gourmet Lardner that my art is superior to what he will find Chez Les Cubs and Les Pirates and Les Red Sox!"

Causes Bitter Jealousy

Naturally, a hot dog expert of my standing causes a lot of rivalry and bitter jealousy among the various chefs. If I happen to say to an interviewer that the cuisine in Shibe Park, Philadelphia, is unexcelled in July, the chef in St. Louis (Antoine) will tear out all his hair, while the Mahatma at Ebbets Field (Albert) will be dissuaded from suicide only by the thought of his wife and fourteen children, all of whom are students of the hot dog, or the "dog hot," as we call it in epicurean circles.

Mr. Harry Stevens was the first man—outside of my great-uncle, Maitre Napoleon Alexandre O'Toole Lardner, of Donegal—to fold the wurst in the loving arms of a fragrant roll. Having solemnized this union, Mr. Stevens put it on a mass production basis and made the dog available to the poor and the humble in ball parks all over the country. No greater service to humanity was ever performed.

Speaking for myself, the dog forms the major part of my diet from the middle of April till the first of October.

The original Stevens is dead, but his four sons—of whom Frank is the titular head of the house—carry on. Of course, not every dog in every ball park is a Stevens dog. Variations have been produced, some of them highly commendable. The Philadelphia dog, for instance, washed down with a sparkling beaker of grand cuvee pop (the 1918 vintage), is famed for its succulence. I am very partial to it myself, in months which have no "R" in their names.

But the glorious tradition of the Stevens dog still commands respect. The true gourmet is satisfied to sit and contemplate Mr. Frank Stevens, just as the art-lover contemplates the Louvre. It makes Mr. Stevens kin of nervous, but what of it?

Got New Type of Dogs

We have our differences now and then. A couple of years ago Mr. Stevens, fascinated by my monograph, "The Effect of Sunshine on the Hot Dog, with Notes on Thirty-Four Varieties of Mustard" ($1.50 at any bookdealer's), sent me a case of dogs, a new type, for criticism.

These dogs were whippets. They did not possess the full body and area of the true or standard dog, and I was forced to tell the master that the shift was suicidal.

"Furthermore," I said, "they do not make good eating outdoors, and no dog should be eaten indoors."

"Bah, Lardner!" said the great tycoon. "You quibble."

"No, I don't, Maestro," I replied. "That's where the matter stands. For all ambitious students of the dog hot, I suggest the Yankee Stadium blindfold test. Taking his position in the lower stands of the stadium, the novitate is blindfolded and given three dogs from the third-base counter, the first-base counter, and the center back of home plate, respectively, to be eaten at intervals of five minutes. With a few days practice, he should be able to tell which is which."

It's a simple trick, of course, for a veteran gourmet like myself. The first-base dog is slightly ripe, the first-base dog is slightly ripe, and the home plate dog has the proper medium bouquet. A good dog man won't miss one time in fifty. You can arrange your own test, of course, in your own ball park, allowing for local variations.

At this time I call on all dog lovers, amateur, professional, and semi-pro, to pay tribute to the House of Stevens and to the humid hound for which it stands. If there's a hamburger man in the room, throw him out.

North Enders' lead to a single point at 30-29 with five minutes to go. Rice knotted the figures for the first time in the game with three minutes remaining on a foul toss, thus setting the stage for Dean's game-winning point. The lineup:

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 10 (AP)—David Alderice, 53, former University of Michigan football star, died today of burns suffered early Sunday in a fire in which his wife, Mrs. Cornelia Kaesby Alderice, and his 8-year-old son were killed.

Another son, David Alderice, Jr., 22, Princeton University star half-back last fall, was released only a few hours earlier from the same hospital in which his father died.

Young Alderice suffered burns in attempting to rescue members of the family from their blazing home.

THE SPORT TRAIL
By WHITNEY MARLIN

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Gather around, you bathtub sailors, and get the story of the dory. They've taken the bounce out of the bounding main by moving some 130 water wagons into Grand Central Palace for the 36th annual national motor boat show, so we combat admirals can get the lowdown without getting our feet wet.

The "poor man's show," they're calling it this year, although a glimpse at the curried and manicured craft parked in the vast display area leaves vague doubts as to just what is meant by "poor."

An official explains it this way: "There are 750,000 motor boats in the country, but only about 5,000 are classified as real yachts. Consequently the display primarily is for the man with the small income. Why, in 1930 we had what we termed the million dollar show fleet. I don't think the total value of the boats this year is a quarter of that sum."

Nevertheless and regardless, the palace exhibits have enough glitter and allure to give an Arizona cowboy water on the brain. They range from a little 57-foot number you can have for around $38,000 to a $25 duckyboat which is just about big enough for a fat Mallard.

There are cruisers from 23 feet up, with 30 feet the most popular size. There are speedboats good for 43 miles an hour, and outboards good for 43 miles a gallon. There are 10-foot sailing skiffs and 30-foot cruising sloops.

The engine and accessory exhibits are as fascinating as the boats themselves. The engines range from a 10-pound, one-half horse power outboard to massive diesels. The diesels, incidentally, seem to be getting smaller.

The accessories include everything that goes on a boat but a seasick sailor. There are coils of stout hanging rope, lights of all descriptions, radios, bells.

Anyway, if you're really serious about getting some of this watered stock you can figure on $80 to $100 a foot up to 30 feet, $120 to $150 a foot from 30 to 35; $175 to $250 a foot from 35 to 40 feet, $250 to $300 from 40 to 45 feet, and let your conscience be your guide from there on up.

The motor boat market is expanding steadily, with numerous artificial lakes and reservoirs being formed right along.

It's the citizen with the average income who keeps things booming, and it's these water bugs whom the show officials and manufacturers finally have got around to recognizing as the backbone of the industry. We wealthy fellows don't buy our yachts at shows, anyway. We buy them after we go to sleep at night.

Parsons To Play Davis High Tonight

PARSONS, W. Va., Jan. 10.—(Special to The News)—Saturday evening's basketball game between Coach Lambert's Parsons Panthers and the Davis high school Wild Cats may prove to be a cinch for the latter team since the Panthers' defeat at Thomas, Wednesday evening, by a narrow margin of 35-34. The Panthers will have to show something different than in the past two games if they expect to top the lanky Davis five. Saturday evening's game will be played in the Thomas high school gymnasium at 7:30 o'clock as the new Davis high school gym is still under construction.

Monday evening of next week will bring a home game between the Panthers and Coach Wolfe's five of Belington high school. The Belington team is a group of seasoned and experienced players featuring a high scoring guard, Poling, and a center who stands well over six feet.

Wednesday evening the Panthers will meet Piedmont high school at Piedmont and will play Elkins high school on their home floor Friday, January 17.

W. Md. Grid Hero Pays Belatedly for His Higher Education

FREDERICK, Md., Jan. 10 (AP)—Western Maryland College today won a $250 judgment against James F. (Bull) Draper, football coach at St. Mary's College, for expenses that allegedly accrued when he was a student at Western Maryland.

The suit, scheduled for a jury trial, ended abruptly when Draper's counsel acknowledged the judgment in favor of Western Maryland, Draper's Alma Mater.

Draper, a 1936 graduate of Western Maryland, was sued for the balance due on a bill of $535 which the college contended represented fees Draper owed for the first and second semesters of 1936-1937 and the Summer session of 1937.

CHAMPIONS AND THEIR CHANCES FOR 1941

No. 4—The American League

LOS ANGELES—As good as and as game as they were last year, 1941 offers no cheerful outlook for Detroit's pennant-winning Tigers. It carries chunks of indigo.

They carry an aging infield into the scramble and also a pitching staff that isn't any too young, and in spite of one or two good-looking rookies. And they also face the chance of losing Hank Greenberg in the draft before another summer passes on.

The loss of Greenberg, a great ball player, a fine team player and a winning competitor, would be a dagger thrust into the Tiger heart. You don't replace Greenbergs—not often anyway.

Buck Newsom still will be a valued entry who is far from through. But Bridges and Rowe will be guesses through a long campaign.

The Yankee Chance

The New York Yankees will be favored again. They won't be the Yankees of two years or three years ago. But with the addition of young talent coming up from Kansas City and other camps, they will be better than the Yankees of 1940.

Big Ernie Bonham alone in the pitching department will make a big difference in the right direction. The other young Yankee pitchers will be more experienced and no great dependence will have to be placed on the veterans. Ruffing still has more than a few victories packed away in his right arm.

Don't overlook Priddy and Rizzuto from Kansas City, two coming stars. And there is always Joe DiMaggio, one of the greats. DiMaggio's value to a team is extremely large.

I also believe Joe Gordon and Charlie Keller will have better seasons than they put across last summer. Gordon led his second base No. 1 spot to Bobby Doerr of the Red Sox last season, while Keller fell away badly in his hitting. But both are young and ambitious and should come back with a rush.

Bill Dickey will be something of a guess. He has been on the job a long time, a dozen years back of the plate. No one has worked harder nor given more. No other catcher ever drove in more than one hundred runs four years in a row.

Bill Dickey was a big part of the Yankees' phenomenal success—both as a ball player and as an inspirational force. But not even the rugged Dickey can go on forever. Buddy Rosar, however, can step in with his share of stuff.

At this spot in calculating events, the Yankees seem to have the better chance to pick up where they left off.

City Police and Street Employees Given Furloughs

Commissioner Orr Says Police Layoffs Will Save $800 during Period

Minor curtailments in both the police and street departments were approved yesterday at a meeting of the mayor and city council for the purpose of balancing the budget for the fiscal year which ends on March 31.

Approximately thirty patrolmen will be affected by the order which calls for laying off each man for a single day without pay during the months of January, February and March. Under the present setup the patrolmen receive one day off a month with pay.

Will Save $800

Commissioner James Orr estimated that the extra pay off for each patrolman will enable the department to effect a saving of approximately $800 in the last three months of the fiscal year. He intimated, however, that the police may not be forced to take the extra day off in March if it is seen that the department's account can be balanced in the final month.

Action in the police matter was taken yesterday after a report by City Auditor Arthur B. Gibson showed that the department had a balance of $19,360.20 as of December 31, 1940. Out of an appropriation of $90,000 the department has expended an average of $7,848 monthly over a period of nine months. If the curtailment is not made, it was pointed out, the department will show a deficit at the close of the fiscal year.

Reynolds More Hopeful

The layoff of employees in the street department also is necessary to balance accounts. The street department has a balance of approximately $5,000 with which to operate for the next three months.

Edgar H. Reynolds, commissioner of streets and public property, admitted that a minor curtailment will be put into effect in his department in the succeeding months of the fiscal year.

It was pointed out that the street department had been very fortunate this winter as weather has been mild and no heavy snows or sleet storms have visited Cumberland. Last winter the city spent approximately $500 for cinders for the streets. Cinders were purchased for $15 a carload. With two and a half months yet to go, however, there still is a possibility of considerable bad weather and in such instances it costs the city plenty.

Unusual Case Is Heard in Court

Johns Hopkins U. Wins Verdict over Holder of 99 Year Lease

A jury in circuit court had an unusual case to consider yesterday in the action which was filed by Johns Hopkins university against Charles S. Dickinson, who held a ninety-nine year lease on the land upon which the new Montgomery Ward building is being built.

The lease was executed in 1860 by Dickinson, who has probably been dead many years. The university docketed the action in order to clear the record of this outstanding lease and prevent a "cloud" on the whole situation.

The jury brought in a verdict in favor of Johns Hopkins which had purchased the property from Montgomery Ward and then leased the building to the mail order house on a long term agreement.

William S. Jenkins, who with Walter C. Capper represented the university, said the case was unusual in that it was the first time such an action had been entered in circuit court for many years.

One factor which favored the university was the long time in which the lease had been ignored and the absence of any person to further the case for Dickinson, he added.

The purpose of the paper is the interchange of information and experience among the various members of Selective Service boards, an article states.

Another article tells of nationwide radio hookups four evenings each week during which Selective Service is explained for the information of the general public. The programs are each five minutes long.

Formal Application for Airport As WPA Project Is Made by City

The mayor and city council, at a special meeting yesterday, made formal application for a municipal airport near Wiley Ford, W. Va., to be constructed as a Works Projects Administration project.

The application was signed by Mayor Harry Irvine and Arthur B. Gibson, city auditor, and will be forwarded to Fred W. Springer, area representative of the WPA.

Action was taken following a conference in the morning between Springer, the mayor and council and Charles Z. Heekert, city attorney, and William H. Rice, county WPA superintendent.

Springer explained that if the city is willing to put up the amount promised under a suggested Civil Aeronautics Authority project of $150,000 along with money being spent on other WPA projects in the city, the WPA may be able to build the field.

Due to the fact that CAA funds for airport construction have been exhausted there is no immediate chance of obtaining funds from that source, Springer said.

He sought the approval of the mayor and council so that work can be started on the project within the next month. All available WPA labor in Cumberland will be employed on the work and only Maryland men will be used, Springer stated.

Rice informed the council that projects on which 180 men are employed will be completed within a month. These and other men will be put to work at the airport. The work will be mechanized as much as possible.

The airport is of first importance because of the money already invested in land and plans, Mayor Irvine declared.

A $900,000 bond authorization bill which includes $150,000 for a municipal airport will be presented to the state legislature next Tuesday by the city attorney.

$22,000 in Road Bonds Are Issued By Commissioners

The issue of Allegany county road bonds recently passed by the county commissioners were taken to Baltimore to be properly signed.

Bought by the Mercantile Trust Company and Stein Brothers and Boyce, of Baltimore, the bonds must be signed by the officials to put them in force.

Simeon Green, president of the Board of Allegany County Commissioners, Walter C. Capper, clerk, and Walter A. Johnston, county auditor, were the participating officials.

The $22,000 road bonds were authorized by the county commissioners to make up the difference between the amount raised through gasoline taxes and the $100,000 needed to retire road bonds of 1936.

Permission to pass supplemental road bond issues to make up the difference between funds derived from gas taxes and the $100,000 bond payments was granted by the legislature several years ago.

Naturally a marine does not choose for himself the style he prefers to wear. Such decisions are made by the commanding officer of barracks or detachment, who prescribes the uniform of the day for the men under his command.
